China Begins New Attack On All Fronts Near Hankow

25,000 of Invaders Reported Cut Off

Cathay Is Exultant Over Tokyo's Dropping Olympic Plans.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), July 16.—Reinforced Chinese armies defending Gen. Chiang's provisional capital in Hankow today launched a vigorous new counter-offensive against the land, water and air forces of Japan and appeared to be holding their own on all fronts in the Hankow area.

A Chinese war office spokesman said the Japanese vanguard had been driven from the suburbs of Kiukiang, a key city in Hankow's southeastern defenses, and Chinese shore batteries sank two Japanese motor launches in the Yangtze River off Hukow and scored a direct hit on the stern of a Japanese warship causing "an explosion followed by fire."

Chinese Reported Fleeing.

[Unconfirmed Japanese reports said Chinese had started to withdraw their troops from Kiukiang after destroying foreign property, including the American Hospital School, the French Catholic Church and British, American and Japanese riverfront property, the Associated Press said.

[But Chinese said 25,000 Japanese troops concentrated at Hukow, at the eastern side of the entrance to Lake Poyang were cut off by a counter attack and were being supplied with food and munitions dropped from airplanes.—Editor's note.]

The Chinese spokesman claimed the powerful Chinese Lion Hill forts still were resisting terrific aerial attacks and bombardments by warships.

Guerrillas Claim Victories.

Victories also were claimed for Chinese guerrilla armies operating in Shantung and Shansi provinces.

Fragmentary radios from Hankow said 20 Japanese bombing planes were "missing" after attempting again to bomb the Wuhan (Wuchang, Hankow and Hanyang) cities.

The great south China metropolis of Canton was heavily bombed by Japanese naval planes and scores of Chinese were killed in towns along the Canton-Hankow Railway.

Mass Escape Peril In Arizona Prison Brings Out Troops

Florence, Ariz., July 15 (U.P.).—The Arizona State Prison was placed under military rule tonight to guard against mass escapes of convicts.

Gov. R. C. Stanford ordered the National Guard to enforce the military decree and aid regular authorities in controlling the prison, from which 20 inmates have escaped in the last six weeks.

In Phoenix, Guardsmen were ordered to march to the institution tonight. The troops were to be fully equipped for field duty, armed with machine guns and gas bombs.

A preliminary survey of the prison by Adj. Gen. Alexander M. Tuthill and several staff officers resulted in the order for troops.

What Holds the British Empire Together?

Why do the British, once proud masters of the seas, refuse to do anything while their trade ships are being blasted to pieces in Spanish waters? In case of war, would the many possessions of Great Britain unite as one? They don't have to unite—yet they would. Lord Strabolgi, former member of the Admiralty war staff of Great Britain, explains why the loosely-joined British Empire is a united front on war and peace in Section III—

N. Y. Gives Hughes a Big Hand; U. S. Needs Air Records, He Hints

Jimmy Walker, Ticker Tape Lend Pre-Crash Touch to Ovation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—From the Battery—jammed with sweltering humanity—through the canyons of the financial district, up lower Broadway through delirious, wildly cheering crowds, Howard Hughes and his four world-girdling companions rode today to the acclaim New York reserves for heroes it has taken to its heart.

Hughes, wearing an Oxford gray suit, a white shirt and black tie, had slept more than 12 hours. Pale and a little jumpy, he was nevertheless fresh. He rode in the first car of the procession.

Lieut. Thomas J. Thurlow, U. S. A. navigator, rode in the front seat of the second car. The other navigator, Harry P. M. Connor, sat with Ed Lund, fight engineer, and Richard R. Stoddart, on the rear seat.

Wives in Next Car.

The wives of Thurlow, Stoddart and Connor and Thurlow's boy, Tommy, 3, rode in the next car.

It snowed as the triumphant procession snailed through packed streets—snowed ticker tape and torn telephon directories and note paper and pamphlets—as they traveled the "celebrity trail" to the city hall.

Modest men were these scoffers at time and distance whose ears still rang with the bedlam that greeted them yesterday when they landed at Floyd Bennett Field after they had flown around the world in 3 days and 19 hours.

Other Lands Grabbed Off All the Honors, He Says to Press.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—Howard Hughes, who circled the world with four companions during a hazardous 3 days and 19 hours, issued a statement today because, as he put it, he was afraid he might get nervous if he had to answer questions about his feat.

The statement, passed out at a press interview in the constant turmoil in the lobby of the Drake Hotel, where he spent the night, stamped him as a patriot who was apprehensive the world might not rate American engineering genius at its true worth.

"If credit is due anyone," he said, "it is due the men who designed and perfected to its present remarkable state of efficiency the modern American flying machine and equipment."

Before the flight started, he had obtained promises from the four members of the crew that they would not commercialize their experiences. Dozens of requests for the personal services of Hughes and his crew, at fancy sums, had been received. Each was turned down.

Dictates Statement.

The statement at the hotel—dictated to a stenographer after the flier appeared in the lobby in a frantic search for one—was suffused with an anxiety to prove America produces airplanes as good as any in the world. Subsequently he repeated it, almost word for word at an official luncheon in his honor.

"The airplane was invented and

Ickes Blocks Work Asked By 'Lobbyist'

Applications Suspended for 8 Projects in California.

By the United Press.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes yesterday suspended eight applications for California PWA projects with which an alleged lobbyist had been connected.

Ickes revealed his action in a letter to all PWA regional and field officers in which he declared Glenn E. Miller is "persona non grata" and ordered his aides to refuse Miller any information regarding Federal projects. He accused Miller of representing to municipal officials that he was in a position to expedite their PWA applications.

Ickes first denounced Miller Wednesday for allegedly contracting with the city of Riverside, Calif., to push an application for a $965,000 sewer project. He charged Miller obtained $1,000 under a contract with Mayor William C. Evans of Riverside under which he was to receive 1 per cent of all funds allocated for the project. Ickes sent the mayor a blistering telegram advising that the application had been suspended and demanding an explanation. PWA officials said yesterday no reply had been received.

Bonuses Forbidden.

Regulations forbid payment of bonuses and commissions in connection with PWA applications. The Miller case is the first brought to light by PWA investigators since Ickes and President Roosevelt warned against "chiseling" and "lobbying" in connection with the new recovery program.

PWA officials said an inquiry revealed widespread ramifications of Miller's activities in California, and that Ickes felt it advisable to suspend the other applications pending further inquiry.

Projects suspended are Upland School; Orange County, storm sewer; Santa Monica, city hall; Oxnard, harbor work; San Gabriel, sewer; South Laguna, waterworks; Fall Brook, irrigation, and Tehachapi, disposal plant.

Got $900 for Sewer.

Ickes said investigation thus far showed Miller also received $900 from the town of Wasco, Calif., in connection with a sewer system project, and that he had deducted this sum from the Federal grant to be paid on it.

"At Newport Beach, the records indicate that out of its own funds, the city paid Miller $2,000 in connection with a sewage disposal plant," Ickes said. "There was no

New Yorker To Enforce Pay-Hr. Act

President Gives Post to State Commissioner Elmer Andrews.

By the Associated Press.

El Portal, Calif., July 15.—President Roosevelt today appointed Elmer Andrews, New York State industrial commissioner, to administer the new wage-hour law.

The announcement of Andrews' appointment came late in the day at El Portal, after Mr. Roosevelt had made a day-long tour of Yosemite Yosemite National Park.

At 6:50 p. m. the President boarded his special train for a night trip to Los Angeles. He was to sail for his sea trip on the cruiser Houston tomorrow.

Press Secretary Stephen Early said that Andrews had "extensive experience" with wages and hours in his job as New York labor commissioner.

Andrews was assistant New York labor commissioner while Mr. Roosevelt was Governor of New York. He was named commissioner by Gov. Lehman.

The appointment was a surprise to many persons. Andrews had been among those least-mentioned for the job.

The appointment of an Eastener was a disappointment to many Southerners who had hoped that a resident of their region would be named. Under the wage-hour law, a differential between sections of the country may be made.

In New York, Andrews said he had no detailed plans for administering the act, but that its enforcement would be "by co-operation rather than police power, at least in the initial stages."

Will Take Pay Cut.

Andrews will take a $2,000-a-year pay cut when he assumes his new duties.

As New York State industrial commissioner he receives $12,000 a year. As administrator of the Federal wage-hour law passed at the recent session of Congress, he will get $10,000.

Helen Keller, deaf and blind, was appointed by Mr. Roosevelt as chairman of a commission to promote the Government purchase of goods made by blind persons. Others named were Brig. Gen. Augustus A. Warfield, War Department representative; Alex M. McAhley, Agriculture Department; Commander Arthur H. May, Navy; Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, Treasury, and Fletcher W. Rawls, Commerce.

McAdoo on Train.

McAdoo boarded Mr. Roosevelt's special train at San Francisco last night. Here the Presidential party, preceded by four khaki-shirted motorcycle patrolmen, took a winding road upward into the park.

Mr. Roosevelt sat on one side of his open car, McAdoo on the other and Mrs. McAdoo in between. McAdoo now is engaged in a primary election fight for renomination. There has been speculation the President may indicate his wish that McAdoo be renominated be-

Ohio Indicts 11 in Political Fund Scandal

'Civil Service Employe Is Little Better Than Slave,' Grand Jury Says.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, July 15.—Eleven State officials and employes were indicted today on charges of soliciting political campaign contributions from civil service workers, and their identities were revealed tonight.

Judge H. L. Scarlett announced the names, overruling a motion by Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy that the indictments be kept secret for an indefinite period, probably until after the next elections.

A special grand jury returned the indictments in the course of an investigation of reports that civil service employes were being assessed 5 per cent of their salaries to Gov. Martin L. Davey's campaign fund. He is seeking Democratic renomination.

Those indicted today were:

Jesse J. Gilbert, assistant to the State director of liquor control; Miss Gertrude Fortune, State Superintendent of charities; William Alexander, State liquor store supervisor; Charles Hubbell, auditor in the unemployment compensation commission; Louis Lieb, employe of the State employment service; J. R. Burkey, chief engineer of the bureau of bridges; Edgar Brill, chief of the division of factory and building inspection; Frank C. Hahn, comptroller of the liquor department; Milton P. Hain, assistant supervisor of liquor stores; Mrs. Nora Halter, of the highway department; Arnold F. Reiher, chief statistician of the department of industrial relations.

Seven other persons were previously indicted in the investigation, including State Finance Director M. Ray Allison, former Speaker of the House J. Freer Bittinger and As-

Senate Takes Note.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee yesterday ordered an investigation of charges that WPA relief money on the one hand and State funds on the other are being used in Kentucky's sharp contest for the Democratic Senatorial nomination.

Action was taken in the face of an earlier inquiry by the Works Progress Administration, and a declaration by Administrator Hopkins that "out of more than a score of cases in which political activity was alleged, only two instances of improper conduct could be found."

At the same meeting the committee voted to investigate "politics in relief" charges in two other States—Pennsylvania and Tennessee—and took under "advisement" a Maryland inquiry. It dismissed charges of political abuses in California and North Dakota.

Neither Files Complaint.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, with the full backing of President Roosevelt, is seeking the Democratic nomination in Kentucky's August 6 primaries over Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler.

Neither of the candidates has filed a complaint with the Senate committee, but a recent series of newspaper articles produced affidavits charging that PWA influence is being used freely in support of Barkley, while State resources are backing Chandler.

As the Senate committee unanimously voted its own inquiry into these charges, the Social Security Board decided to investigate assertions that public assistance checks for the aged are being distributed

Bazaar Bomb Kills 12 Arabs In Jerusalem

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, July 15.—Truckloads of British troops manning machine guns streamed through the twisting streets of ancient Jerusalem tonight to forestall possible new disorders arising from explosion of a bomb in a crowded bazaar.

Twelve Arabs were killed and at least 29 wounded when the bomb burst among throngs of Arab peasants in David street marketplace.

The incident was one of the most serious in the 11 days of Jewish-Arab disorders in the Holy Land.

Casualties since July 5 have totaled at least 372. Of these, 29 Jews and 666 Arabs were killed, and 176 Arabs and 101 Jews were wounded.

Old City Gates Closed.

Police closed all gates of the old city after the marketplace explosion. Soldiers with fixed bayonets forestalled a threatened riot among Arabs who had come to the city for Friday morning prayers.

In other disorders, three Arabs were wounded by a bomb in the Safad Arab quarter. Arabs then tried to invade the Jewish quarter and three more were wounded, one fatally, when troops opened fire.

Gayda Chides Roosevelt on Arms Speech

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, July 15.—President Roosevelt should himself set an example of disarmament in the written and spoken word if he expects his appeal for arms reduction to be taken seriously by "strong and proud nations" like Italy, Germany and Japan, Virginio Gayda declared today in the Giornale d'Italia. Gayda is regarded as the newspaper spokesman for Il Duce.

Gayda permitted himself some surprise that President Roosevelt should have advocated disarmament "a few weeks after the decision of the three democratic and militaristic powers, largely on American initiative, to increase maximum warship tonnage from 35,000 to 45,000 tons."

According to Gayda, it would be better to put an end to "the aggressive provocations by responsible men and newspapers of great circulation in happy America against Italy and other countries, summarily listed among the damned merely because they are determined to improve their internal order and acquire a more legitimate and worthy position in international life."

Gayda declared that "the bellicose and aggressive spirit" in certain Reduction Is Sharpest Proposed Under Any New Deal Program.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace asked American wheat farmers yesterday to cut their 1939 plantings about 32 per cent to prevent greater surpluses from complicating the problems raised by this year's bumper crop.

As an inducement for reducing their seeded acreage from 80,000,000 for 1938 to 55,000,000 for next year, the Agriculture Department will offer growers benefit payments which may total $125,000,000.

Swede Develops 466 M.P.H. Motor For Strato Planes

Development of a Swedish airplane motor designed for stratosphere flight at speeds up to 466 miles per hour was reported to the Department of Commerce yesterday by the American commercial attache in Stockholm.

Speculation in flying circles here centered on the possible stimulus to Sweden's undeveloped aviation industry if the Lindequist design proves practical for commercial and military use.

Labor's League 'Blacklists' 13 Democratic House Chairmen

Thirteen Democratic chairmen of major committees of the House of Representatives, all except two of whom are Southerners, have been placed on the campaign "blacklist" of Labor's Non-Partisan League, supported chiefly by the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The list, made public yesterday by E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of the league, includes altogether 39 members of the present House and three Senators up for re-election who fall in what the labor league describes as category "D," men whose records in Congress warrant nothing but outright opposition from labor.

The 13 Democratic chairmen placed in "D" category by Oliver are Representatives Doughton, North Carolina, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee; Steagall, Alabama, banking and currency; McReynolds, Tennessee, foreign affairs; Vinson, Georgia, naval affairs; Sumners, Texas, judiciary; Bland, Virginia, merchant marine; Mansfield, Texas, rivers and harbors; Whittington, Mississippi, flood control; Lanham, Texas, public buildings; Rankin, Mississippi, veterans' affairs; Derouen, Louisiana, public lands, and Kocialkowski, insular affairs.

Politicians Tell Views in Talks At Va. Institute

New Deal Hit, Defended; Progressive Asks Third Party Movement.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 15.—A Democratic Congressman and a Republican Congressman took turns tonight defending and assailing the New Deal, and then heard an official of the National Progressive Party tell why he believes the Nation needs a new political movement.

Principals in the triangular discussion before the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs were Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat), of Maryland; Representative Dewey Short (Republican), of Missouri, and Ralph Immell, executive director of the National Progressives of America.

Immell asserted there was no other choice for the Nation but to form a new movement "upon a base as wide as America itself—upon all who are determined to secure and preserve the right of a free people to work and by their work to add to the health of the country.

Purposes Cited.

"Unlike the bewildered and spoils-mad Democratic Party, or the sterile shoguns who control the Republican Party," he said, "the National Progressive Party is united from top to bottom with a respect for purpose, has the courage to act, the money to build, and the intelligence to conceive and direct a program that will beat down the forces of bigotry and intolerance" and guarantee freedom and security of livelihood and person to every American.

Representative Lewis predicted the new social security system, railway old-age pension system, unemployment insurance system and other advances would stand "for generations to come as great altitudes in the geography of history."

Representative Short asserted the national picture was darker today than in 1933. He said that after five years of New Deal experimentation there were more than 13,000,000 persons unemployed, farm prices had dropped to the lowest levels on record and the country's railroads faced the severest crisis in their history.

Offers Two Suggestions.

Lewis offered two suggestions as means of balancing the industrial budget.

1. The employed people of the country must share the available employment justly with those unemployed so that all may stand equal in the distribution of the employment asset of society.

2. Capital on its part must make a similar sacrifice.

If both of these processes could be "adequately set to work," the New Deal spokesman said, a maximum of "exercised purchasing power should result and much of an approximate balancing of production and an effective purchasing power follow."

Short said the Congressman from Maryland might represent the New Deal, but that he did not represent the "real Democratic viewpoint," adding:

"There is little in common between what Mr. Lewis has said and the political philosophy of those great disciples of Thomas Jefferson, the two Democratic Senators from this State, Senators Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd."

The Missourian accused the New Deal "planners" of "counting on remaining in power through a permanent relief problem which affords them opportunity to control great masses of votes through the political dispensation of relief funds."

Advocates Changes.

To restore America to recovery Short advocated several changes, including:

Revision of the entire system of Federal relief to eliminate "waste, corruption and the playing of politics."

Amendment of the social security act in order to "improve its effectiveness . . ."

Amendment of the national labor relations act to end the "present wasteful and disruptive discord between employer and employe and among labor organizations by clearly setting forth the mutual obligations of worker and employer and the duties of both toward the public."

Elimination of those New Deal policies which "have strangled business, discouraged private investment and thus decreased opportunities for employment."

Repeal of the "dangerous discretion business.

Repeal of the "dangerous discretionary authority which the Congress has given to the President" over the Nation's monetary system.

Lodging administration of relief with the States, supported by "adequate" Federal grants.

Putting an end to "further Government competition with private enterprise in order that business might be able to create jobs with some certainty as to the future."

relationship between the allotments for these projects and Miller. Therefore, so far as the PWA allotment is concerned, the city of Newport Beach has wasted $2,000 and Wasco $900 of their taxpayers' funds."

Meantime, Ickes pushed other activities in the program by allotting $8,251,135 for 28 additional PWA non-Federal projects in 12 States, estimated to cost $18,335,856. The largest is an allocation of $5,415,750 for a waterworks improvement program in Chicago, costing $12,035,000.

The new projects brought total PWA allotments to $320,650,077 on 2,197 undertakings. They will cost an estimated $609,560,799 when finished.

Andrews, N.Y. Expert, Named To Administer Wage-Hour Act

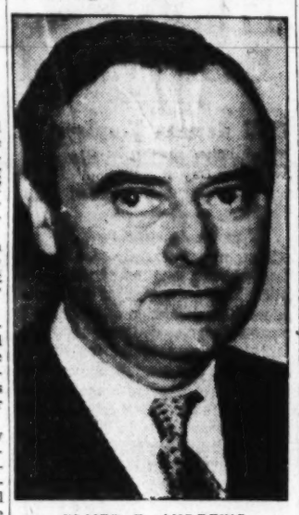
Often on the auto ride Mr. Roosevelt craned upward to see the tops of mountains. He appeared to be interested particularly in Elephant Rock, which juts out from a mountainside, and in far-dropping waterfalls along the way.

At some places hundreds of tourists lined the road, cheering and waving. Mr. Roosevelt waved back. The comparatively quiet drive was in striking contrast to the President's earlier trips through crowded, flag lined streets, on his cross-country journey.



ELMER F. ANDREWS.

Devised Job Insurance.

Elmer Andrews, who devised the New York State unemployment insurance system, recognized as the most efficient in the Nation, succeeded to his present post when Frances Perkins left it to become Secretary of Labor in the Roosevelt Cabinet.

It was believed Andrews would follow through several pending State projects before coming to Washington to begin the ponderous yet delicately-involved task of setting into motion the machinery of the untried new law.

Andrews, known in Washington as "a very calm person," said in an Associated Press interview in New York, where he still was awaiting official word of his appointment, that he believed all industry would co-operate with the Administration in carrying out the new act.

He hailed the law, writing minimum wages and maximum hours for lower-strata labor into the Nation's statutes for the first time, as "the most important piece of legislation of the Roosevelt Administration."

He said he believed the law would eliminate wage-cutting practies as a form of competition among business concerns and that it would stop factories from moving around the country searching for cheap labor.

Andrews said he would use extensively the provision in the law allowing for administration by State labor departments, on the basis that such departments are less disposed to shake-ups in political changes.

With at least 2,000,000 workers affected—some estimates range slightly lower but some have gone five times higher—and with the act focused on every firm doing business which affects interstate commerce, thousands of employers will be forced to revise their pay rolls and work-week schedules.

Lewis Won't Comment.

It was asserted by Administration sources last night that President Roosevelt had received advance assurances that appointment of Andrews would be acceptable to organized labor, but last night President William Green, of the A. F. of L., was the only labor chieftain who would comment.

Green declared Andrews "is well-fitted by training and experience to render exceptional service."

"We hold Mr. Andrews in high regard," he continued. "The officers of our New York federation of labor have co-operated with Mr. Andrews as industrial commissioner of New York and we expect to continue that co-operation."

Chairman John L. Lewis, of the C. I. O., said that organization would make "no comment."

In 1933 Andrews served as labor adviser for the National Labor Board in the coal-mining regions of Alabama, Kentucky and Pennsylvania.

President Roosevelt in 1934 appointed Andrews chairman of the American delegation of official observers at the Geneva International Labor Conference. The delegation's recommendations resulted in this country's joining the international labor office.

Following his graduation from the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in 1915 with a degree in civil engineering, Andrews engaged in insurance work, becoming familiar with practical compensation problems.

He served as a lieutenant in the U. S. Air Corps in the World War, after which he gained wide experience as an engineer in various industrial fields.

Andrews is a member of the Society of Professional Engineers, the Municipal Engineers Society, the Masonic Order and Delta Tau Delta Fraternity.

In party politics, Andrews is a Democrat. He recently announced willingness to accept the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor. In political philosophy he is liberal.

The fire, one of 80 burning simultaneously in the State, encircled Mount Abernathy on three sides. At one point it was only a mile from Ryder wood.

Chief Warden C. S. Cowan of the State Fire Association, reported that 300 fighters were endangered by the advance of the flames into treacherous canyons.

Hearings End For Bethlehem In 11th Month

Agreement on 142 Points Cuts Labor Board Trial by Five Months.

By the United Press.

A ten-month National Labor Relations Board hearing on charges against Bethlehem Steel Corporation ended last night after parties to the dispute agreed upon 142 stipulations which officials estimated reduced the hearing time by five months.

Trial Examiner Frank Bloom took under advisement 13,000 pages of testimony introduced in the case which grew out of the "little steel" strike and announced he would prepare a report as soon as possible. He said opposing attorneys will have until August 17 to file briefs.

Hearing Began in September.

The hearing, which began September 8, 1937, had been in recess since April 22, 1938, while attorneys agreed upon the stipulations which were read into the record yesterday.

The controversial case, based on charges by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee that Bethlehem dominated its "employe representation plan," ended at 9:10 p. m. and Bloom announced evidence would not be taken in a representation case until after the NLRB rules on the "company union" charge.

In the latter case, the S. W. O. C. seeks sole bargaining rights for 55,000 Bethlehem workers in 14 plants.

Contract Invalidated.

Meanwhile the Labor Board invalidated a contract between a Texas employer and an alleged company union and directed the company to reimburse its workers for union dues deducted from their wages.

It ordered the Lone Star Bag & Bagging Co., Houston, to disestablish the "employes union" and to notify its employes that contracts between the company and the unaffiliated labor group are void.

The NLRB directed the company to reinstate 13 employes with back pay.

The order for reimbursement of workers for dues was believed unprecedented. The contract between the company and the allegedly employer-dominated union contained a provision for a check-off of 10 cents per week from each worker.

U. S. Protection Asked.

By the Associated Press.

John Brophy, director of the C. I. O., appealed to Attorney General Cummings and Gov. Frank I. Merriam of California yesterday to protect the civil rights of C. I. O. workers engaged in a wage-cut strike in the lumber industry at Westwood, Calif.

Brophy told Gov. Merriam "lawless vigilante mobs" have evicted C. I. O. workers and their families from their homes and driven them from the town without food or clothing.

He appealed to the Attorney General "to take action under the Federal statutes to bring a halt to these attacks on workers and their families."

Brophy and labor's Non-Partisan League sent similar protests to the Labor Department and the Senate Civil Liberties Committee.

The Westwood C. I. O. workers are members of the International Woodworkers of America Union.

Aerologist Terms Weather Problem In Flying 'Licked'

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—D. M. Little, of Washington, D. C., chief aerologist of the Federal Weather Bureau, said today weather was no longer civil aviation's big "bugaboo."

He spoke at the semiannual engineering and maintenance conference of the Air Transport Association of America.

"We've got this weather problem just about licked," he said, pointing out that his department's network of reporting stations could forecast weather conditions accurately and more expeditiously than ever before.

He said his department's new program provided for weather reporting stations at strategic points on these new airways: Bangor-Caribou, Me., Dayton-Chicago, Cheyenne-Huron, S. Dak., Tampa-Miami, Winslow-San Francisco and Great Falls-Billings.

Price Policies Study Praised By O'Mahoney

Monopoly Inquiry Head Lauds Conclusions of Brookings' Report.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, chairman of the Joint Monopoly Investigating Committee, yesterday found words of praise for parts of the Brookings Institution study of industrial price policies, and said it would be "grist" for the monopoly investigation.

Senator O'Mahoney particularly commended conclusions in the report that "the right of freedom of economic enterprise must be used in the public interest."

"The report is a contribution to our investigation," said the Wyoming Senator.

"While I have not had an opportunity as yet to read the complete study, I find nothing with which to disagree in the following concluding paragraphs:

"'If the American businessman demands the right of freedom of economic enterprise, society in granting it to him may properly ask that he use that freedom aggressively in the public interest. This, to our way of thinking, is the challenge which the industrial system makes to the industrial executive.

"'If he cannot meet it, the system of free enterprise under private capitalism is doomed to a condition of invalidism, low vitality and unproductiveness, which is utterly incompatible with the natural resources, productive equipment and man power which the Nation has at its disposal.'" distributed among individual farmers under formulae set up in the farm act. Growers are not required to comply with allotments, but only those who do so are eligible for maximum benefit payments and Government loans authorized by the legislation.

Wallace Proposes One-Third Cut in Wheat Acreage

Officials said the acreage reduction was the sharpest ever proposed under any New Deal farm proposal. Should the wheat growers comply, the area devoted to wheat would be the smallest since before the World War.

An allotment of 62,500,000 acres was established for the 1938 crop, but only for the purpose of computing benefit payments.

On the basis of official forecasts, this year's wheat crop will pile up a surplus of more than 400,000,000 bushels, or more than half a normal year's domestic consumption and export requirements.

H. R. Tolley, agricultural adjustment administrator, said compliance with allotments by a majority of wheat growers would reduce present surpluses, but would result, with average abandonment and yields, in a crop larger than normal.

Marketing Quotas Hinted.

Officials said if the acreage actually planted was very much larger than the allotment, and weather conditions were average, it probably would be necessary to invoke marketing quotas to restrict sales of the 1939 crop.

Quotas would have to be approved by two-thirds of the wheat growers voting at a referendum next spring. Farmers selling in excess of their quotas would be subject to a penalty of 15 cents a bushel.

The farm law provides that should farmers reject quotas, no price-supporting loans could be extended to either co-operating or noncooperating growers.

Expresses Alarm.

London, July 15 (AP).—Representatives of 16 of the world's leading wheat-producing nations, meeting today at a session of the International Wheat Advisory Committee, were understood to have expressed alarm concerning an expected huge world wheat crop.

The committee adopted the secretariat's report on the prospective world wheat situation and asked their governments to "give their most earnest consideration" to the urgent problem.

The governments were asked to agree on an early date for the next meeting, which probably will be held in the fall. United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy presided.

By the United Press.

The Commodity Credit Corporation announced yesterday it has disbursed $238,616,731 in loans through July 14 on 5,462,292 bales of cotton.

This included loans of $6,999,973 on 166,465 bales which have been paid, and the cotton released. The cotton loans averaged 8.40 cents per pound.

The corporation also disclosed it had made loans totaling $21,511,259 on 44,371,506 bushels of corn. The average amount loaned per bushel was 48.48 cents.

by State social security department agents in Kentucky, instead of by mail.

Barkley had charged Thursday night that State agents, personally distributing the old-age benefit checks, were warning beneficiaries their payments would stop if they did not vote for Chandler.

Agents Prompt Inquiry.

The Social Security Board denied it had received complaints from Barkley and said its inquiry was prompted by reports from the board's own regional agents that the distribution system had been changed. The board favors deliveries by mail.

Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, said the Senate inquiry will be confined to charges of misuse of funds both for and against Barkley, as recently made in articles by Thomas L. Stokes, Scripps-Howard newspaper reporter.

In passing through Kentucky, the President recently gave Barkley the most sweeping indorsement he has yet given a candidate. In Lawton, Okla., yesterday, Chairman Jed Johnson, of the House Democratic Steering Committee, predicted Barkley would be the Presidential choice in 1940.

A copy of Hopkinis' 15-page answer to newspaper stories of "Kentucky politics in relief" is on file with the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee. Chairman Sheppard said the investigation was determined upon after a study of both the newspaper stories and the Hopkins answer. He said the committee acted "under the specific direction" of the resolution setting up the committee, although no sworn charges are before it.

Another Democrat on the committee, said privately some of the members were influenced in voting for the investigation not only by the conflict between Stokes' articles and WPA findings, but by the "punishment" meted out in the two Kentucky cases found to be authentic. Two WPA straw bosses accused of political activities were warned by officials, but kept on the rolls.

After a report from Investigator Ralph Burton, the group said there was evidence of a "minor violation of State law" in the North Dakota primary, but apparently no misuse of Federal funds. Senator Nye (Republican), successful candidate, had charged excessive use of absentee ballots.

No action was taken on a request by Arthur E. Hungerford, Senatorial candidate in Maryland, that the committee investigate charges by Senator Tydings, candidate to succeed himself, that dismissal of the State Director of Federal Housing, Henry W. Webb, was an Administration blow at his candidacy. Hungerford called the Tydings charges "unbelievable." Tydings has not asked an inquiry.

An investigator already has been sent to Tennessee, where Senator Berry (Democrat) is opposed for renomination by Tom Stewart, J. Ridley Mitchell, John R. Neal and Edward W. Carmack. Sheppard declined to detail the Tennessee charges.

Sheppard said "several incidents" would be investigated in Pennsylvania, notably a request by Barnard Davidowitz, of "the Royal Oaks Party," that the commitee look into an alleged attempt by Republicans to gain control of Pennsylvania poll watchers to which his party is entitled.

The committee definitely limited its inquiry to the 34 States in which there are Senatorial primaries or elections.

Present at yesterday's meeting besides Sheppard were Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Walsh, of Massachusetts (Democrats), and Senator White (Republican), Maine.

Walsh, who sharply rebuked Deputy Works Progress Administrator Williams when he made a political speech to organized relief workers, and sponsored the committee's first resolution warning Federal agencies to "keep hands off" elections, reiterated yesterday that the group "means business."

In voting for the Kentucky investigation, Walsh said he was particularly interested in the two cases the WPA itself had authenticated. He said the committee's action to date has had a "deterring" effect.

Walsh said actual complaints reaching the committee up to the present have been "few in number and not of a substantial character." He said there had been "rumors and allegations" in the press and some anonymous letters charging "a purpose to use Federal funds in support of particular candidates," but the committee has received "little of a definite character."

13 Democrats Blacklisted by Labor League of South Carolina, and Tydings, of Maryland.

There appeared some uncertainty on Oliver's part whether the senatorial "D" list should be extended to four by including Senator Clark, of Missouri.

The Nonpartisan League, Oliver explained, has four classifications for members of Congress who are up for re-election. The "A" list includes those for whom the league will go down the line 100 per cent. Those in the "B" and "C" lists fall into a sort of no-man's land, and the nature of support they will receive will depend upon circumstances and records of their opposition.

The "D" men are "out," but two Southerners on this list already have been renominated. This is the case in Alabama and North Carolina, where primaries have been held and Democratic nominations for Representatives Doughton and Steagall are tantamount to election.

Oliver was emphatic that the League was "out to get" every member of the House Rules Committee who voted to block consideration of the wage-hour bill, and also in his opposition to the House Rules Committee as an agency of House procedure. In this connection, Oliver said Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the committee, had been listed by the league in the "C" category because he had voted for the wage-hour bill. League dissatisfaction on other scores hurt O'Connor's record.

Oliver named a partial list of Senators to whom, he said, the league had given these ratings:

"A"—Thomas, of Oklahoma, and Barkley, of Kentucky.

"B"—McAdoo, of California, and Bulkley, of Ohio.

"C"—McCarran, of Nevada, and Adams, of Colorado.

He said Senator Caraway of Arkansas had a higher rating than her primary opponent, Representative McClellan, whom he placed in the "C" classification.

In addition to the Democratic chairmen, the Nonpartisan League placed the following members of the present House on the blacklist:

Representatives Clark of North Carolina, Driver of Arkansas, Lewis of Colorado, Cummings of Colorado, Cox of Georgia, White of Idaho, Coffee of Nebraska, Lamneck of Ohio, Dies of Texas and West of Texas, Democrats; Hoffman of Michigan, Mapes of Michigan, Lambertson of Kansas, Brewster of Maine, Treadway of Massachusetts, Martin of Massachusetts, Knutson of Minnasota, Eaton of New Jersey, McLean of New Jersey, Taber of New York, Wadsworth of New York, Rich of Pennsylvania, Ditter of Pennsylvania and Taylor of Tennessee, Republicans.

Jenkins Charges TVA Dams Are 'For Power Only'

Jenkins, member of the joint Congressional committee investigating the TVA, issued his statement after the delegation completed an inspection of the authority's dams in the Tennessee Valley.

The Ohio Congressman said he favored "Federal assistance for flood protection," but added that flood control could be accomplished without large dams costing hundreds of millions of dollars."

Bitter Primary Fight Seen for Gov. Browning

Crump's Machine Battles Tennessee Leader's Purge of Lists.

By the United Press.

Memphis, July 15.—Leaders in the Shelby County political machine of Boss E. H. Crump, engaged in one of the most bitter campaigns of this State, noted for its hot battles at the polls, studied means tonight of discrediting Gov. Gordon Browning's "purge" of Memphis registration lists.

Renomination of Browning in the August 4 Democratic primary would be a smashing blow to the prestige of the Crump organization, which is attempting to put State Senator Prentice Cooper into the Governor's office by handing him at least a 60,000-vote majority in Shelby County.

Two years ago Browning rode into office with aid of this solid Shelby County vote. But in the last year Crump and Browning have patched and the governor is basing his campaign on a denunciation of the "Mussolini" the "Hassissippi."

Conducting Inquiry.

At present, the Governor's crime commission is conducting an inquiry into alleged election fraud and vice conditions in Memphis. The Browning-appointed Shelby County election commission is making a purge of registration books and the Browning-appointed Shelby County attorney general reliably is reported planning to stage a series of raids on bootleggers and vice centers to discredit Crump's city administration.

At first hearings before Browning's crime commission here, witnesses testified stuffed ballot boxes, fraudulent registrations, "10-cent votes" and high-powered salesmanship methods had been used in past elections to swell returns of Crump candidates in Shelby County.

W. O. Bolton testified colored men were registered numerous times and hundreds of persons never registered personally but their names were put on the books by Crump workers.

Dead Persons on Lists.

Browning's "purgers" announced preliminary results showed dead persons carried on registration lists, registrations from graveyards and vacant lots, and numerous registrations from church buildings.

Political observers give Browning an even chance to crush Crump's machine. Browning hopes to keep the Shelby vote at a low figure through the purge of registration books. He also plans to build up a lead in other sections of Tennessee by stressing revelations of the crime commission investigation.

The bitter gubernatorial fight has shoved into the background the campaign of Senator George Berry, a Browning appointee. Berry is opposed by Tom Stewart, an attorney who has the support of the Crump machine.

Plane Hits Hospital, Killing One Inmate; Passengers Unhurt

Buenos Aires, July 15 (AP).—A Pan-American Airways transport plane making a forced landing near a suburban airport today ripped into a one-story frame hospital for the aged, killing one of the inmates.

Eight passengers and five members of the crew escaped with minor cuts and bruises, but blind and helpless patients in the hospital were showered wtih debris. Fifteen were hurt, three critically.

Pilot C. H. Goodwin, a North Carolinian, had taken off from the airport at suburban Ituzaingo, about 15 minutes before the crash. One motor had gone bad, the air line said, and he was attempting to return to the airport when the accident happened.

King Suggests New Jail Here, Hits Spending

Dr. Chester Pond, N.Y. Tax Expert, Named to Head D. C. Levy Survey.

Chairman William H. King of the Senate District Committee yesterday suggested erection of a new jail here. At the same time he termed the District's program to obtain up to $18,150,000 from the PWA a "spending mania," though without opposing any proposed construction projects.

Also, after his conference with the District Commissioners yesterday, announcement was made of the appointment of Dr. Chester Pond to head a survey of the city's tax structure for the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

After conferring also with PWA Administrtaor Ickes, Senator King urged caution against extravagance in borrowing money to construct new buildings here. "After all, District taxpayers must repay 55 per cent of the obligations they assume, and the Nation's taxpayers must eventually repay the other 45 per cent given as a grant," he warned.

Ponders New Jail.

"I introduced the bill to allow the District to obtain the money on a pariyt with the States and pushed it through Congress. But if I had it to do over again I don't know that I would urge such a large sum."

He revealed that he had urged the Commissioners and Ickes to delay action on an application for $1,600,000 to modernize the District Jail.

"I have been giving considerable attention to the question of crime," he said, "and the jails here and all over the country fail in the subject of vital importance of segregating youthful and chronic criminals. I believe the youths should be segregated, and I intend to introduce legislation at the next session of Congress to provide for the segregation here and nationally.

"It may be advisable to build a new jail here where the youths can be kept apart. I just don't know whether I would be in favor of spending the money now for the jail. I will talk to the Commissioners about it Monday."

While adding that he was "not so keen" on some other projects for which the Commissioners had applied for funds, he said "generally, I approve of their program."

Cheaper for District.

He was not keen on spending $2,500,000 to begin a municipal center, or $2,750,000 for a new National Guard Armory. "But I suppose we need them," he added.

"I do believe that space should be provided for the recorder of deeds out of this money," he said. The Commissioners have not yet applied to the PWA for funds for that office.

Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, had little to say about the Senator's caution against extravagance. "It will be considerably cheaper for the District to construct these buildings with 45 per cent of the cost granted," was all he would remark.

The tax survey which is aimed at developing a permanent tax set-up for the city is scheduled to get under way at 2 p. m. Monday, When Dr. Pond meets with Senator King, the District Commissioners, Colin F. Stam, chief of staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, and members of the tax advisory committee composed of District officials and civic leaders.

Dr. Pond is assistant director of research under Mark Graves, New York State tax commissioner. He will be furloughed to make the District study. He is considered well experienced in municipal tax problems, and he will work under direction of Stam.

$10,000 Appropriation.

In 1930 he took his doctor's degree from Cornell University, majoring in public finance. One of his accomplishments has been a report on full value of real assessments as a prerequisite to State aid in New York. This was published by the New York State Tax Commission.

The District study is made possible by a $10,000 appropriation by Congress after two years of debate on how the city should meet its rising expenditures. A thorough investigation of present and possible revenue sources will be made.

One of the problems to be studied will be that of repaying the money to be borrowed from the PWA. Already the District has been allotted grants of $1,260,000 and $1,540,000 in loans for Municipal and Juvenile Court buildings and an addition to Gallinger Hospital.

U.S. Census Not on 'Up and Up,' Resources Committee Complains

By the Associated Press.

Head-counting in the United States isn't what it should be, the National Resources Committee complains.

While giving the Census Bureau a pat on the back for putting out "on the whole, an admirable product," the committee indicts the bureau's figures on six counts. The comment follows a report on "The Problems of Changing Population," which the committee submitted to the President a little more than a week ago.

While at work on that, the committee found out these things:

"Many divorced people are reported as married, widowed or single, instead of as divorced.

"There is evidence that about 5 per cent of all children under 5 years of age are usually not enumerated.

"Illiteracy figures are so undependable that they must be used with great caution.

"There is an apparent discrepancy of more than a million between the figure for the native population (native white and Negroes) in 1930, and that expected on the basis of the 1920 returns and death rates during the interval, apparently due to greater underenumeration in 1920 than in 1930."

The committee feels there is a serious need for more accurate information about population, in order to facilitate planning for future developments, so it is sending out a statement of the facts to the 45 State planning boards, urging them to "encourage and participate in the future collection of essential information."

Only 3,400 taxicabs may be operated in the city today, as 700 received licenses in a last-minute rush yesterday. The number will be 200 less than that licensed July 16 last year, and some 1,200 less than the licenses in effect during the fiscal year ended June 30.

Richmond B. Keech, of the Public Utilities Commission, pointed out that from the middle of June to the middle of August are lean periods in the taxi business and many drivers don't obtain new licenses until business picks up in the fall.

He said that it was likely that many owners who operate their cabs on a part-time basis would not get new licenses after the insurance act goes into effect August 29.

Meanwhile, the Independent Taxicab Owners Association filed a petition with the P. U. C. charging that the recent order limiting cab association to 1,000 cabs was illegal and asking for a reconsideration.

Poison Ivy Threat Is Very Aptly Met By Caution of Poet

The District Health Department burst into rhyme yesterday to warn citizens against poison ivy. The rhyme read:

You must ever careful be
Of the vine with leaflets three.

First-aid remedies are a lathering with old-fashioned yellow laundry soap or pure juice of the "touch-me-not" or jewel weed. If these fail, treatment by a physician is recommended. "An ounce of prevention, however, is learning to identify and avoiding the vine which has three leaves and in certain seasons has waxy, whitish berries which resemble mistletoe.

Fairfax Police Seek Gang in Truck Thefts

Alexandria Resident Held; Vans Looted While in Motion.

A gang of colored truck thieves who hang on tail gates and toss the cargo onto the roadside while unsuspecting drivers pass through Fairfax County was being sought by county police last night.

An Alexandria merchant was arrested as a suspected member of the gang. He denied connection in the thefts. Police declined to divulge his name.

The search followed the recovery by Capt. Heywood J. Durrer, of the Fairfax police, of 80 bicycle tires, 25 bicycle guards and a dozen gasoline cans scattered along the Washington-Richmond highway, about 3 miles south of Alexandria.

It was in this vicinity that a cigarette truck driver was last seen since a $30,000 cigarette cargo was hijacked last week. The truck and cargo have been recovered by FBI agents and two suspects arrested.

Residents of the neighborhood told Capt. Durrer they saw two colored men leap on a van yesterday morning and toss the cargo out. They seized the pair, but the robbers broke away before Capt. Durrer arrived.

Capt. Durrer was told the colored men jumped from a small truck, which followed the van as it moved slowly up a long hill.

Smith Rejects Dodd Offer to Debate 'Issues'

Calls Opponent's Views 'So Divergent' He 'Would Not Offend Audience.'

In a letter rejecting the offer to debate, Smith wrote Dodd:

"Frankly, your public utterances, relative to your conception of government, are so divergent from our American constitutional form that I would not offend the intelligence of a Virginia audience by debating them with you.

"I am satisfied from my long association with the people of Virginia that they are quite content with the American system of Government under which we live."

Points Out Issues.

In pointing out the issues of the campaign, Smith asserted:

"I propose to continue to exercise my best and most careful judgment in the discharge of my duties in the House of Representatives.

"You propose to exercise no judgment or discretion but to follow 100 per cent the views and wishes of others.

"I propose to support the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

"You propose to obey whatever orders may be given you.

"I propose to continue to be a Congressman.

"You propose to be an automaton.

"The people of my district know me and know what I stand for. I suggest you introduce yourself and the things you stand for in such ways as you see fit.

"Conduct your campaign according to such methods as you think the dignity of the office dictates. I shall conduct my campaign in my own way.

"You make the statement I said in a speech 'I would be proud to be a rubber stamp of President Roosevelt.' This is an unqualified misstatement without any foundation in fact. Presumably you make it from hearsay, as it is not likely that you ever heard me make a political speech, as I understand that you have spent most of your recent years in Germany."

Pledges Support.

Smith's campaign for re-election was bolstered last night when more than 150 workers from Fairfax County's 25 voting precincts gathered at the Fairfax courthouse to pledge their support. Smith spoke to the crowd, which included most of the political leaders and practically every elective officeholder in the county.

In a radio address yesterday Frank L. Ball, jr., asked Virginia voters to support Dodd in the election. Dodd, he said, would vote for and not against "the progressive measures which will help the Eighth Congressional District of Virginia."

International Secretary Is Here to Arrange Parley at Vassar.

The refusal of Italy and Germany to send delegates to next month's World Youth Congress at Vassar College will cause "quite a gap" in the exchange of ideas at the peace congress, Miss Betty Shields-Collins, international secretary of the group, told Washington reporters yesterday.

The young Englishwoman, who is in this country to complete preparations for the meeting, explained that Germany laid down four conditions which must be met before it would participate.

"Hitler Jugend leaders asked that German should be the language of the congress, that no refugee groups be represented, and that there be no criticism of the interior regime of Germany," Miss Shields-Collins said.

"We agreed unanimously to meet these requirements, but their fourth request was that no Young Communists should be included in delegations from other countries. Several countries already had planned to send Communists, and we felt we could not ask them not to come."

Miss Shields-Collins said she was told unofficially that the Jugend leaders believed "the majority of opinion, both in numbers and countries, would be against Germany."

Italy will be represented unofficially by several individual delegates. Japan will send a Christian delegation, but no representatives of political or student organizations.

The purpose of the congress, which opens with a mass meeting in New York City August 15 and ends at Vassar August 24, is to discuss "Political and economic organization for peace, economic and cultural status of youth and its relation to peace and ethical and philosophical bases of peace." Miss Shields-Collins believes the discussions and resolutions will center around international co-operation as a means to end war.

When negotiations with Germany failed, congress officials decided on English, Spanish and French as the languages to be spoken at the meetings. About 500 delegates from 52 countries are expected, some of whom will spend the equivalent of two years' salary to make the trip.

BETTY SHIELDS-COLLINS.

Miss Shields-Collins said yesterday. Maintenance and entertainment expenses for the conference will be provided from a fund being raised in this country by the American organizing committee.

In Washington, Miss Shields-Collins has talked with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes. All have given her hearty endorsement of the program for the congress, she said.

"Secretary Hull repeated in part his Nashville speech, in which he emphasized international co-operation," she explained. "He was much interested in the idea of world co-operation through young people. All the Cabinet members were impressed by the strong South American delegations we expect."

President Roosevelt has assured congress leaders that he will pay an informal visit to the meeting. Mrs. Roosevelt will address the opening session.

The first congress, Miss Shields-Collins said, was organized in 1936 under auspices of the Federation of League of Nations Societies. Later the group became autonomous.

Carnival Robs Tydings of His First Audience

So Senator Sits on Platform With Tawes at Firemen's Frolic.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., July 15.—Senator Tydings tonight deferred the formal opening of his campaign, planned to take place at Deal's Island, 18 miles from here. Instead, he made a brief address at a volunteer firemen's annual carnival in Princess Anne.

Several explanations were offered for failure of the Senator to launch his campaign, as announced, at Deal's Island.

Wallace Quinn, a Somerset County Democratic leader, said that the change was made because lack of an amplifying system prevented the Senator from speaking at the island. Persons leaving the schoolhouse at Deal's Island, where Senator Tydings dined with Quinn and other county leaders, said the speech was called off because there was not a sufficiently large audience.

Another explanation was that the carnival opening held a greater attraction than a political meeting.

The Senator was invited to share the platform at the carnival by J. Millard Tawes, candidate for the nomination for comptroller. With them on the platform also was William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, candidate on the slate of Mayor Jackson for the nomination for attorney general.

In Baltimore, Mauritz Hallgren, author and editorial writer, who retired from the senatorial campaign to support Representative David J. Lewis, issued a statement asserting Tydings uttered a "deliberate falsehood" when he said in a radio address last night that Hallgren was an "out and out Communist."

"Afraid to face the real issues of the campaign, Millard Tydings has taken refuge in a slanderous attack on me," Hallgren said.

"I am not now, never have been and never will become a member of the Communist Party. I am not now, never have been and never will become a member of any organization affiliated or connected, directly or indirectly, with the Communist Party. I have never advocated, communism for our own or any other country and do not in any way subscribe to the principles or program of the Communists.

"I shall expect Millard Tydings, within a reasonable time, to publish a retraction of the statement he has made concerning me and to offer a public apology for that statement. I shall also expect the newspapers, news agencies and the radio company which carried the original statement to give equal prominence to the retraction and apology which Millard Tydings will make."

Swithin Fable Rates Poo-Poo From Scientist

Says Superstition Works Some Places; Ice Man Felled by Heat.

St. Swithin's Day, which was yesterday, in case you'd forgotten, has found a defender in—of all places—the Wether Bureau.

"Why, of course, there's something to the belief that if it rains on St. Swithin's Day it will pour for the next 40 days," said Dr. William J. Humphreys, noted meteorologist, when The Post called to offer St. Swithin's greetings.

His observation was as startling as it was unexpected, inasmuch as nothing peeves our weather men so much as people who take things like groundhog day, aching corns, etc., seriously.

"Take Sitka or Edinburgh or Pago Pago," Dr. Humphreys invited. "It's raining there practically all the time. So if it is wet there on St. Swithin's Day isn't it pretty safe to assume it will be the same the next 40 days?"

A maximum of 90 degrees on St. Swithin's day caused the prostration of an ice man who was stricken as the city sweltered.

William Roberts, 62, colored, ice dealer, of 4403 Dix street northeast, collapsed as he was loading his truck at the Uline Ice Co., Third and M streets northeast. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians said his condition was not serious.

The humidity was 44, somewhat less than Thursday. Occasional light breezes from the river fanned the Capital.

Today, the Weather Bureau predicted, will be fair with variable northwest winds and little change of temperature.

Atlantic Flight Of Pick-a-Back Ship Next Week

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, England, July 15.—Britain's unique pick-a-back seaplane Mercury was pronounced ready today, after a successful 2,040-mile endurance test, for its first transatlantic flight next Wednesday.

The pick-a-back is an experimental "composite" machine comprising two complete planes, a large "parent ship," named Maia, and the smaller, speedier Mercury, joined to the Maia's back by secret devices.

The long-range Mercury has enough power for a 210-mile an hour speed in the air, but is unable to take-off from water level alone with sufficient fuel for a long trip. It is built to "take-off" in the air, from the Maia's back, at about 3,000 feet. Thus handled, it has a flying range of more than 4,000 miles.

The plans called for the joined craft to fly to Foynes, the River Shannon air base in Ireland, next Tuesday. There the Mercury will be loaded with 1,200 gallons of gasoline, oil and provisions.

Then on Wednesday morning the two, geared together, will take the air, their motors and propellers working as one unit. At a given signal the planes will drift apart, the smaller craft pointing for Botwood, Newfoundland, or possibly Montreal if the range is found sufficient.

The parent ship Maia, a flying boat, then will circle back to her base.

The pick-a-back was invented and designed by Robert Herbert Mayo, technical general manager of Imperial Airways. It is different from war-time composite machines in that when its two components are joined it is an eight-engined biplane, completely synchronized, and not simply two planes locked together.

400 Hughes-Type Aircraft Motors Bought by Britain

New York, July 15 (AP).—The Curtiss-Wright and Wright Aeronautical Corporation tonight announced the British Air Ministry had purchased 400 Wright cyclone engines to be installed in 200 reconnaisance planes, one of the largest orders ever placed with an American aircraft concern.

Guy W. Vaughan, president of the corporations, said the engines were identical to the type used by Howard Hughes in his round-the-world flight and were for installation in twin-motored craft similar to the Hughes plane.

Berenger Asks Solid Front in Refugee Crisis

U. S. Sends Consular Agent to Germany to Gather Information.

By John Elliott.
Special Cable to The Post.

Evian-Les-Bains, France, July 15. The Evian conference on German refugees (probably unique in the annals of international gatherings as the first conference without a crisis) closed here today on a strong note of Anglo-Franco-American solidarity in the present tense international situation sounded by Senator Henry Berenger, honorary chairman of the conference and the leader of the French delegation.

But the only concrete achievement this conference has to show is the setting up of a permanent international organization in London to tackle the refugee problem. This was, as Myron C. Taylor, head of the American delegation, told the conference today, "only the beginning."

[George Brandt, who holds the rank of consul in the American foreign service and who was attached to the American delegation at the conference, left today for Germany under instructions from the State Department for visits in Berlin, Vienna, Stuttgart and Hamburg, the Associated Press said.

[A spokesman for the American delegation said Brandt's mission would be "to gather information from American sources concerning the number and type of persons who desire to leave Germany under the sponsoring of the permanent refugee organization established by the Evian conference in London."

[He is to report to that body after its members assemble August 3 in the British capital.—Editor's note.]

Senator Berenger, who is president of the foreign relations committee of the French Senate, lifted the veil on the political implications of the Evian conference which—to believe him—goes far beyond the mere refugee problem. Delivering the final speech at the public plenary session this morning, the leader of the French delegation declared he considered himself "the faithful interpreter" of the delegates of the 32 nations assembled in Evian in stressing what he called "the novelty and the originality" of what has been taking place on the shores of Lake Lemon for the last week.

"Perhaps I ought to whisper it," continued Berenger, "but it is a fact that for the first time the United States of America has agreed to participate in an intergovernmental action for a work which reaches beyond the confines of its own country. I see in this a happy augury for the future."

The English were very unhappy about Berenger's speech. In authoritative British circles the view was frankly expressed the French senator in publicly airing his interpretation of American participation at the Evian conference, had been guilty of a grace indiscretion.

20 Rebel Planes Brought Down, Loyalists Say

Government Reports Only One of Its Craft Was Destroyed.

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, July 15.—A defense ministry communique said today Spanish government pursuit planes and antiaircraft batteries brought down 20 insurgent planes in three days of intensive aerial warfare on the eastern front north of Valencia.

The communique indicated the government air force had been reinforced strongly for the struggle north of Sagunto, and now outnumbered insurgent aricraft in the area. Only one government plane was reported lost in the sky skirmishes.

The major encounter of the three days of fighting came late yesterday, when a fleet of government planes engaged 20 insurgent craft of Italian make, the communique said. Two insurgent planes were said to have been shot down, three burst into flames and four crashed in insurgent territory.

Eleven insurgent planes were reported shot down near Sarrion, on the Teruel-Sagunto highway.

(Dispatches from insurgent territory today said that scores of insurgent bombers were blasting government lines in the Sarrion sector and that government troops were in retreat.)

A violent counteroffensive unleashed by Gen. Jose Miaja's forces in Eastern Spain today carried the red, yellow and purple banner of the government to the top of strategic Marcos Mountain, about 34 miles north of Valencia, near the Mediterranean.

It was recaptured by the government militiamen as they fought steadily to dam the onrushing wave of insurgent troops toward Valencia, former government capital.

American circles is revealed by the innumerable letters he received from across the Atlantic, and any new disarmament conference should be preceded by "disarmament of speech and writing openly hostile to certain nations which, in the United States—beginning with the President—and in certain other countries, poison the international atmosphere and create a moral and physical necessity for reaction and reparation."

Simon Asks Disarmament.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 15.—Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, Sir John Simon, coupled a hopeful view of the economic situation today with a stern warning the world must find a way to halt the "terrifying total of expenditures on armaments."

In House of Commons debate on the government's finance bill, Sir John stoutly defended his staggering budget of nearly 1,000,000,000 pounds (about $5,000,000,000). Commons approved the finance bill without a record vote.

Britain's big budget provides for an expenditure of £264,000,000 (about $1,320,000,000) for the fighting services. Regarding arms costs Sir John said:

"If we do not succeed, and the world does not succeed, in finding some way in which we can stop the folly of this everlasting expenditure on armaments, then indeed the future we are preparing for our children is one at which we may shudder."

This warning against re-armament followed by one day upon President Roosevelt's statement in San Francisco the United States was anxious to take part in a general disarmament movement.

So they called Thompson and told him about the gift.

"They're American Beauty roses," said one of the officers, after he opened the box. "They're beauties, too. And there's a card. Shall I read what it says?"

Brows knitted in the inspector's office as the officer read Thompson the message on the card.

"Catch the Rose Burglar. Ha Ha Thompson. You and your bulls are a lot of dopes.

"The Rose Burglar."

Thompson was not impressed.

"We know who the Rose Burglar is," he said, "and will soon get him."

It was suggested to Thompson that the flowers be sent to Casualty Hospital, where 2-year-old Margaret Ann Schamock, daughter of Private John Schamock, motorcycle policeman, lay seriously injured, after falling from the back porch of her home at 4120 Grant street northeast yesterday.

"That's what we'll do with the Rose Burglar's flowers," said Thompson.

So the flowers were sent to the hospital late last night to the little girl whose father was one of the men instructed to arrest the Rose Burglar if he saw him.

Police, investigating the mysterious appearance of the roses, learned a young woman answering the description of the Rose Burglar's alleged girl friend, had called the messenger to a restaurant in the 800 block of Fourteenth street northwest. She was seated at a table with a young man, and they handed the messenger the note and the order for the roses.

Hull Says Chief's Arms Discussion Speaks for Itself

He commented that Mr. Roosevelt's address at San Francisco spoke for itself.

His attitude was taken to indicate that the United States was not assuming any initiative toward disarmament, but would be willing to meet other nations at least half way.

Hughes Ovation Reminds N. Y. Of Boom Days

From the Battery, through Wall street's canyons and up lower Broadway to the city hall came the five men to stand blinking before lights and the praise heaped upon them by Mayor LaGuardia, Grover Whalen, head of the World's Fair, and Jesse H. Jones, head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, fellow-Texan of Hughes'.

Patient, perspiring spectators pushed their way into the city council chamber and stood throughout the ceremonies. They listened politely to the speeches, but they wanted to see these five men who had made the world seem incredibly small.

Hughes spoke shyly and almost inaudibly. His flying companions nodded as he expressed the belief a camaraderie of airmen of the world would prove an agency for peace.

Tells of His Purpose.

He asked, with quiet fervency, that the flight might not be regarded as a stunt. He reviewed the careful preparations and said 200,000 engineering hours had gone into the record-breaking plane.

"I have been asked what the purpose of the flight was," he said, "and my answer is that if it succeeds in bringing the fliers of the world together in closer co-operation, then it has accomplished something worth while."

"There is a kinship among fliers the world over," he said.

Mayor LaGuardia told Hughes and his crew that "we can hail your splendid record without detracting one bit from previous ones established by other fliers."

Then through pressing crowds the Hughes party left city hall after their ride up from the Battery, through the canyons of the financial district and up lower Broadway. Financial giants waved from skyscraper windows side by side with bookkeepers and stenographers. Businessmen and bums, shoppers and idlers, were all in the 75,000 who jammed Broadway and the 35,000 or 40,000 around city hall.

Behind screaming police sirens, the procession swung north from city hall, across to lower Fifth avenue and up Fifth avenue, which has seen longer parades, but never one received like this one since the days when Jimmy Walker was mayor, when Lindbergh first flew the Atlantic, when Gertrude Ederle conquered the English Channel, or Byrd flew across the North Pole.

Cross-town traffic was at a standstill as the cars bearing Hughes and his companions, his ground crew, wives of the fliers and various notables followed from city hall, across to Fifth avenue and up to Central Park.

Jimmy Shows Up.

The progress up Fifth avenue was a swifter, less intense repetition of the lower Broadway scene. Ticker tape and paper fell in showers. Pedestrians whistled, yelled "Atta boy, Hughes," women shrieked at him.

A crowd had gathered outside the Metropolitan Club and reserves were dispatched to the place to reinforce the 50 policemen originally sent there.

The crowd cheered as Hughes and his companions arrived, and they gave another loud cheer when former Mayor Jimmy Walker, redfaced, hot, turned up. Walker and former Mayor John P. O'Brien had attended the city hall reception. The mayor was accompanied by Newbold Morris, president of the city council.

There, at luncheon, Mayor LaGuardia, Whalen and former Mayor Walker spoke briefly. Hughes blushed as he arose to acknowledge their tributes. He merely said he was "deeply pleased" and thanked everyone in behalf of himself and his crew.

"Howard," said Walker, "you flew all the way around the world and you weren't late at any stop until you came to the city hall, and then, like everybody else, you were late there."

He referred to the slow progress of the procession from the Battery through streets where thousands of persons hung out of windows, perched on ledges, and even clung to the front of Trinity Church. Shrubs in Trinity Churchyard were festooned with ticker tape until they looked like Christmas trees.

Hughes and his men were greeted when they left the club by a crowd which had been waiting nearly two hours just to catch a glimpse. The official party went to its headquarters at the Hampshire House, where it was reported Hughes planned to spend the week-end in the country at Saybrook, Conn. The family home of Katharine Hepburn, actress, is near Saybrook, and it was believed Hughes might see her there.

Cries from the thronged streets of "How are ya', Howard," and "Atta boy, Hughes," brought a wave of the battered, brown felt hat, which Hughes wore when he left New York last Sunday and which he still had on when he landed on Thursday.

Hughes and his companions appeared embarrassed by the demonstration and somewhat bewildered as the crush of the crowds stretched all the way from the Battery to far uptown. Asked whether the celebration bothered him, he answered only with a deep sigh.

John P. V. Heinmuller, chief timer of the National Aeronautical Association, announced the official elapsed time set by Hughes on his around the world flight was 91 hours 8 minutes 10 seconds.

He said the wheels of Hughes' ship left the runway at Floyd Bennett Airport at 6:26 p. m., Eastern standard time, last Sunday, and the flight officially ended at 1:32:10 p. m., Eastern standard time, yesterday, when the ship came in from the west over the Floyd Bennett Aviation Field.

Heinmuller's calculations will be recorded by the International Federation of Aviation in France, as well as the N. A. A.

The official timer said Hughes' actual flying time, that is, his time in the air between landing fields on his trip, could not be computed until International Federation timers' records were received from Moscow, Omsk and Yakutsk.

Russia Hails Heroes, Too.

Moscow, July 15 (AP).—While New York thundered a welcome to Howard Hughes and his four world-circling companions, Moscow today greeted exuberantly two of Soviet Russia's own air heroes who made a 24 hour, 4,300-mile nonstop flight from here to Vladivostok.

The Soviet fliers were Maj. Vladimir Kokkinaki, veteran test pilot, and A. M. Bryandinsky, navigator, who returned in midafternoon in the big red twin-motored monoplane Moscow they flew to Vladivostok on June 28.

Hull, Russians Felicitate Him.

By the United Press.

Secretary Hull last night telegraphed congratulations to Howard Hughes and his four companions on their record 'round-the-world flight for carrying forward a "new high standard in the best tradition of aviation."

Hull, who is the ranking Administration official in the Capital in the absence of President Roosevelt and Vice President John Nance Garner, told the fliers that he hoped to congratulate them personally if they come here.

"I have heard that you are coming to Washington and I hope to have the opportunity to congratulate you personally on your splendid achievement," Hull said. "You and your associates have carried to a new high standard the best traditions of aviation."

Simultaneously, Hull made public congratulatory messages from Maxim Litvinoff, people's commisar of foreign affairs of Soviet Russia, and Soviet Ambassador Alexander Troyanovsky, vacationing in his native country, and his replies thanking them for aiding the American fliers.

"Have been greatly pleased to learn of the achievement of Mr. Howard Hughes and his companions who I understand have established a new record for flights around the world and I wish to express to you my admiration for the valiant American pilots," Litvinoff cabled.

Hull replied:

"I greatly appreciate your kind message in connection with the achievement of Mr. Howard Hughes. Please accept my warm thanks for the valuable assistance which was rendered to him and his companions during the course of their passage across the Soviet Union."

Ambassador Troyanovsky said that "our authorities here were only too glad to reciprocate for the help given our transpolar fliers in the United States a year ago."

JOHN J. COOK.

Attention: Howard Hughes.

The "United States Army mechanic named Cook," who mended your plane in Paris and enabled you to complete your record-shattering flight was John J. Cook, son of Mrs. Floyd D. Richardson, of Washington.

You don't know "what he was doing around Paris?" He is attached to the American Embassy there, his mother tells us, and has been for two years. Mrs. Richardson believes he was sent to Le Bourget Airport as part of a member of the official reception committee.

Hughes paid tribute to Cook's mechanical ability soon after his arrival in New York Thursday. The plane's tail wheel was badly damaged during the take-off from Floyd Bennet Field, he said. French mechanics discovered that the "fitting of the tail wheel to the bulkhead of the ship" was ruptured, Hughes told newspapermen.

"The biggest danger was that the break was right up close to the elevator controls and interfered with them. We and the French, who were grand to us, took a look. They threw up their hands and said 'C'est fini'—it's the end.'"

Ed Lund, Hughes' mechanic, located Cook, [illegible] between them they "fixed things up with a log of angle irons. I'd thought maybe we could do it with a 2 by 4, or something, but their job was swell."

Cook, who is 30, was born in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. His meeting with Hughes marks the second time a long-distance flight has influenced his life, for it was May 21, 1927, the day Lindbergh landed in Paris, that Cook enlisted in the Army Air Corps, his mother said yesterday.

He received his training at Langley Field. While stationed at Bolling Field here, about seven years ago, he studied at George Washington University. He was stationed in the Philippines and at the American Embassy in Moscow before going to Paris.

Mrs. Richardson lives at 1223 Vermont avenue northwest.

Interview

originated in the United States," it said. "Since then, the countries of Europe have taken from us, one by one, all the aviation records until at this time the United States does not hold one major record.

"The speed record for seaplanes is held by Italy. The speed record for landplanes is held by Germany. (Hughes' 352 miles an hour was topped by a German at 379.) England holds the altitude record and Russia, with its magnificent flight of last year (from Moscow to Riverside, Calif.) holds the distance record.

Tipoff to His Purpose.

"On top of this, there has been a great deal of talk to the effect that our Army and Navy planes do not compare favorably with those of Europe."

That was a tipoff on one of the purposes of his flight around the world.

"Now," he said in conclusion, "if this flight has done a little to show that American engineers can design, and American workmen can build, just as fine airplanes, engines and aircraft equipment as any in the world, and if it should possibly increase the sale of American planes abroad and thus create a few new jobs for American men in the aircraft factories of this country, then I shall feel well repaid for my time and effort."

He explained his attitude further: "If we made a fast flight, it is because many young men of this country went to the engineering schools, worked hard at draughting tables, and designed a fast airplane and navigation and radio equipment which would keep this plane upon its course.

Hasn't Seen Miss Hepburn.

"All we did was to operate this equipment and plane according to the instruction book accompanying the article."

Someone brought up the oft-repeated question of Hughes and Katharine Hepburn, the actress.

A press agent responded that the flier had not seen Miss Hepburn since he landed at Floyd Bennett Airport yesterday afternoon.

N. Y. Street Cleaners Are Unsung Heroes

New York, July 15 (U.P.).—The New York street cleaning department reported tonight the welcome for Howard Hughes and his four 'round-the-world flying mates today was the second largest in history—just 100 tons short of the mark set by the Lindbergh welcome in 1927.

The street cleaners' measurement is computed on the basis of the amount of waste paper cleaned up after the parade.

Farley Urges Youth War on Conservatives

Fall Elections to Determine Future Course of U. S., He Declares.

By the United Press.

Seattle, July 15.—Postmaster General Farley, placing himself squarely behind President Roosevelt's appeal to rid Congress of "conservatives" of all parties, said tonight that the fall elections will determine whether "we shall go on with Roosevelt or go back to Hooverism."

Speaking as chairman of the Democratic National Committee before the national rally of the Young Democratic Club of America, Farley said "If Roosevelt is your leader, then give us a Roosevelt Congress to support Roosevelt policies and Roosevelt principles—for that is common sense."

"After six years of unprecedented achievement for popular government and the people's economic and social rights, that has attracted the admiration of the entire world, we are going to determine this fall whether that is what we want or whether we want reaction," he said.

Farley warned that dictators throughout the world are challenging "everything fundamentally and traditionally American," and said that American youth is assuming civic responsibilities at a "critical" moment in the world's history.

He attacked "black reactionary" forces in this country, who, he said, are "blind to everything but their immediate personal profits, who do not have foresight enough to see that the preservation of democracy and human liberty demands, through necessary reforms, the solution of the human problem of the mass of the people."

"If democracy is to be saved, if capitalism is to be preserved, we must set our house in order politically, socially and economically—and that is the program dictated by the highest conservatism," he said.

Hits at Rich "Snipers."

"The beneficiaries of special privilege whom Roosevelt saved from the penalty of their economic sins five years ago have mobilized their forces to end reform, to restore the Government to the domination of Wall Street and return to the exploitation of the masses.

"From behind their barricade of money bags they have been sniping at Roosevelt for five years; and now they know that unless they can tie his hands today the movement he has launched for the common good will not and cannot be stopped."

The makeup of the next Congress will determine whether the Nation "shall go on or go back," he said. "And because that is true, because the mobilized, organized, subsidized plutocracy with all its controlled agencies of propaganda will stoop to anything and stop at nothing, the campaign we are entering now is one of the most far-reaching consequence.

"Now in the campaign, so vital to democracy and economic freedom, we pin our faith on the intelligence and fighting qualities of the young men and women of America. New trails which have marked the progress of mankind have almost invariably been blazed by youth."

Reviews New Deal.

Reviewing the work of the New Deal in the fields of taxation, unemployment of relief, labor, industrial loans and public power construction, he said that "never before in history has so much been done for the average man; never has so much been done for honest business and honest business methods; never has so much been done to give stability to honest banking and to create confidence in honest securities."

"We call upon the people not to create a situation where democracy cannot function in a crisis and thus arm the enemies of democratic institutions that have declared war on democracy throughout the world," he said.

"Today I call the young men and young women of America to the colors, and I summon you to follow wherever the white plume of our courageous leaders leads, for it will lead to a brilliant and lasting victory, and to ultimate prosperity for all."

Denegre Estate Asks Tax Review

By the Associated Press.

Executors of the estate of Walter D. Denegre, of Washington, asked the Board of Tax Appeals yesterday to redetermine a $261,123 estate tax deficiency assessed by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Denegre died in 1934. The petition was submitted by his wife, Bertha C. Denegre, and William J. Sohier, jr.

The petitioners contended Mrs. Denegre, when she was married in 1893 in Louisiana, brought $1,104.064 to the community estate of herself and her husband. She contended the portion of that amount not expended should not be subject to an estate tax.

Aviator, Barred For Nose Landing, Hits at Red Tape

Weatherford, Okla., July 15 (AP).—Herman Schapansky, the butter and egg farmer who pilots his homemade planes to one-point landings—on the nose—has been grounded.

"He's a menace to that whole section of the State," said State Safety Commissioner J. M. Gentry, as he ordered Schapansky to stay out of the air because he has no pilot's license.

Schapansky — who soloed and crashed the first time in a junked Jenny biplane with a "Model T" motor after only three flying lessons—retorted:

"I'm a good flier. They don't give an ambitious young man a break in aviation any more. How far do you think the Wright Brothers and Lindbergh would have gone if they'd got caught in this red tape?"

Christian Science Subject Is 'Life'

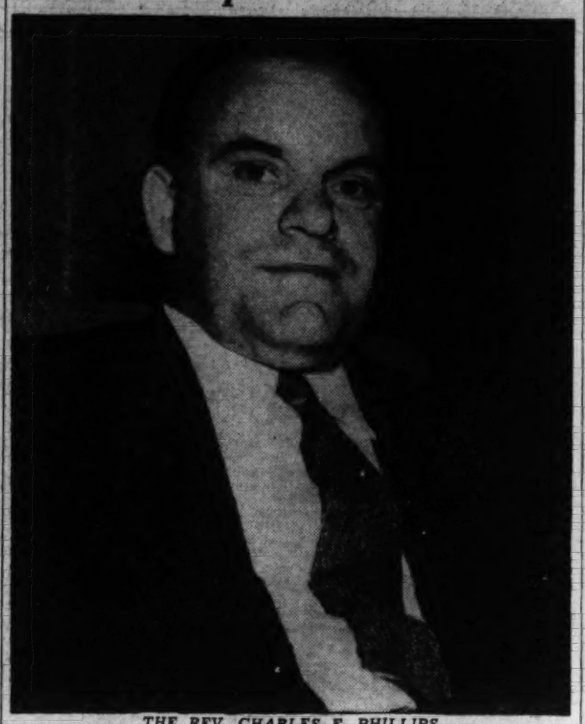
"Life" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the churches of Christ, Scientist tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is held at 11 a. m.

The Golden Text is from John 5:26: "As the Father hath life in himself; so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Wait on the Lord; be of good courage, and he shall strengthen thine heart; wait, I say, on the Lord." (Psalms 27:14.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy. "If the disciple is advancing spiritually, he is striving to enter in. He constantly turns away from material sense, and looks toward the imperishable things of spirit. If honest, he will be in earnest from the start, and gain a little each day in the right direction, till at last he finishes his course with joy." (Page 21.)

Ex-Football, Baseball Player, Rev. Phillips Likes to Meet Men



THE REV. CHARLES F. PHILLIPS.

New Pastor at St. Pauls Southern Methodist Church Believes in Maintaining Professional Dignity While Golfing, Swimming, Fishing.

A pastor who golfs, swims and fishes with the members of his congregation is better able to advise and help them.

This is the belief of the Rev. Charles F. Phillips, new occupant of the pulpit of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church South.

"Professional dignity should always be the rule," smiled Dr. Phillips yesterday. "But there are fine contacts to be made with one's fellowmen in the world of sport, in the out-of-doors, when men naturally are more themselves, and speak their minds and sentiments freely."

Pleasant and ruddy, with a hearty laugh, Dr. Phillips does not look his 38 years. A native of Harford, Md., near the Pennsylvania border, Dr. Phillips received his early education in the public and high schools there.

When he was still a youngster, much preoccupied in learning to throw curves on the high school baseball team, he received his inspiration to enter the ministry.

So he went to Randolph-Macon College, where he was popular on the campus and a member of the football and baseball squads.

"I never really made the teams," said he yesterday in his study at 4700 Thirteenth street northwest.

"But I tried hard, and I was interested in sport."

At the time of the World War Dr. Phillips was in his freshman year at school, and a member of the Students' Army Training Corps.

"I'm not really a veteran because I only served three months on this side," he smiled.

Dr. Phillips was graduated from Candler Theological School, in Atlanta, in 1926 and began his career as a preacher—a career that has met with success because of his humanism and his belief that a minister should be one of his flock every day in the week, not simply a man who delivers a sermon on Sunday.

He has held pastorates at Ingleside, on Maryland's Eastern Shore; Sudley, Va., in Prince William County; Andrew Chapel, in Baltimore, and Frederick Avenue M. E. Church, in Baltimore, a post he filled until he received the call to come here.

Dr. Phillips believes the Methodist Episcopal Churches North and South should unite.

"Just as the Nation is now united 75 years after the Civil War, the two branches of the church should unite," said he yesterday. "There is really no North or South in our religion. Unified we should go ahead to even greater accomplishments."

Shortly after he left college, Dr. Phillips married Mildred Ragan, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Ragan, of Lexington, Ky. They have a 10-year-old daughter Barbara Lee, who frequently pokes her blonde head into her father's quiet study.

Vaughn Bible Class Has Sought 'The Other Fellow' for 50 Years

Calvary Baptist Group Is Oldest of Its Kind in the World.

(Washington boasting the oldest, as well as some of the largest Bible classes in the world, The Post will present in this space for the next three Saturdays, stories of the most interesting of these little-publicized, but active, branches of religious work.)

The average man is already 50 per cent sold on the proposition of Bible class affiliation when he enters a Protestant church, according to members of the Vaughn Bible Class of Calvary Baptist Church, oldest organization of its kind in the world.

All he needs is the invitation to join, say the 500 or more men in the class, echoing the spirit of the founder, Mr. Francis W. Vaughn, a Civil War veteran and Pension Office employe, who systematically canvassed stores, shops and offices in the winter of '89, seeking candidates.

Vaughn's spare time evangelistic efforts netted him the promises of 12 men to attend the inaugural session on Sunday, February 3, 1889.

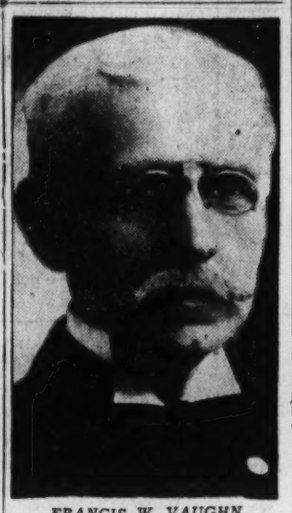
Of the five who showed up two survive—Dr. E. C. Rice and H. R. Meitzler. Dr. Rice has served as secretary for 15 years and as president for two terms.

Encouraged by the response, Vaughn extended a second invitation to the seven "other fellows," who joined the next Sunday morning. The class motto—"The Other Fellow"—was adopted shortly afterward and from teacher down to the last member they have been after "him" for over 40 years.

John D. Rockefeller, jr., in his promotion of organized Bible class work, was probably inspired by the accomplishments of Francis W. Vaughn, whom he lauded in a letter read at the thirteenth annual banquet of the class, held here in 1902. Rockefeller hinted that he planned to launch a similar enterprise in New York City.

The history of the Vaughn Class has been studded with personalities of prominent men in the religious and civic life of the Capital.

Following the founder's death in 1913 Prof. Mitchell Carroll, of George Washington University, was elected teacher. In succession came



FRANCIS W. VAUGHN.

W. S. Shallenberger, Second Assistant Postmaster-general in the McKinley administration; Prof. Louis Bliss, head of the electrical school bearing his name, and Homer J. Councilor, former religious work secretary of the Central Y. M. C. A. Lynn Drake, executive secretary of the Boy Scouts of America, is present teacher. Former President Warren G. Harding addressed the class while in office.

Clyde Crouch, instructor at a local business college, is now president of the class. Among the oldest members in point of service are W. P. Stoval, J. L. Veasey, M. L. Roberts, William Ford, Charles Cook and Dr. T. A. Whittington. The latter joined the organization in November, 1890. Samuel Woodward, past president of Woodward & Lothrop's, was in the group for many years, and W. W. Everett, present executive, is also a member.

Overture For Peace.

There was much more than felicity of wording to President Roosevelt's brief address at San Francisco on Thursday. There was also statesmanship of high quality, culminating in the remark that 1939 "would be a year of world-wide rejoicing if it could also mark definite steps toward permanent world peace."

It may be objected that the observation is a mere truism; that it means nothing for the President of the United States to voice such sentiments unless his Administration is willing to take concrete action to forward systematic pacification in a world which teeters precariously on the verge of war. But the entire setting of Mr. Roosevelt's speech, as well as the words actually spoken, must be considered.

The President spoke in sight of an armada of 63 American men-of-war, which for all its power is only a fraction of our rapidly increasing navy. And he spoke after a public demonstration leaving no room for doubt as to his overwhelming personal popularity, which the world knows is not limited to the Pacific Coast. In other words it was the freely chosen leader of an exceedingly powerful democracy who gave this lead toward reduction of the present staggering burden of armaments.

Mr. Roosevelt also made clear that the United States has no liking for militarization as such. In common with the great majority of Americans he finds only one satisfaction in our present preparedness program. In a country as rich as the United States it will absorb far less of the national income than is the case with any of the other feverishly arming powers. And here, too, is a thought directed overseas. If the United States can match any potential rival without great sacrifice, what could it do if forced by world conditions really to concentrate on the development of military might?

The nations which keep the world jittery today are all straining themselves to exhaustion by their aggressive efforts. To them, as well as to the governments which have sincerely renounced war as an instrument of national policy, Mr. Roosevelt at San Francisco offers a helping hand. "We stand ready," he repeats, "to meet them and encourage them in any efforts they may make toward a definite reduction in world armaments."

As a generality the offer is not new. But there is a significant development of policy in Mr. Roosevelt's specific suggestion that an international conference to this end should meet soon enough to bear definite fruit next year. That is an overture which no responsible government can afford to overlook. The President has taken a step forward in making it. And there is no doubt that he, and the American people as a unit behind him, will meet more than half way any response which bears the earmarks of sincerity and good will.

Doles Of Clothing.

With the placement of orders for $3,000,000 worth of women's winter coats, following the purchase of about $10,000,000 of men's suits and overcoats, Administrator Hopkins announces that the WPA has about relieved the inventory congestion in the cheaper clothing field and opened the way for employment of "thousands of additional people."

Ever since the Federal Government withdrew from all direct relief activities, limiting its aid to work relief and the casual gifts of food supplied by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, great stress has been laid upon the obligation to provide jobs, instead of doles, for able-bodied persons. Now the WPA is not only re-entering the direct relief field but is providing a form of aid that is in many respects particularly demoralizing.

Cash aid not only allows those on relief to exercise personal discretion in making outlays—sometimes a dubious advantage from the viewpoint of relief agencies—but it permits purchases to be made in customary ways through regular channels. For the Government to engage in wholesale buying of clothing or other articles for subsequent distribution among the needy is a very questionable practice. The garment manufacturers are no more entitled to be relieved of excess inventories than any other groups with goods to sell that could be used by those on relief. Furthermore, the purchase of clothing stocks may unduly stimulate manufacture of more garments and lead to demands for WPA purchases as a permanent practice.

The argument that this procedure will have no influence upon normal business is specious. Some of this clothing will be distributed to persons who would have made purchases through regular retail channels except for the Government's intervention. The prices charged nonrelief customers, moreover, are likely to be affected by the transaction while regular distributive channels will be deprived of some business that would ordinarily come to them. Complaints from middlemen are said to be numerous, in fact, and there is reason for their dissatisfaction.

Resort to direct relief emphasizes the inadequacy of the present system of work relief and the need for a thorough-going reformation of the system instead of the haphazard devices now relied upon to meet emergencies for which no provision has been made.

Dynamic Price Making.

Whether economic progress is furthered by constant reductions of prices, or by stabilization of prices at relatively fixed levels, is one of the hotly debated questions of today.

Advocacy of price reduction as "the broadest and most direct road to the improvement of the general economic welfare" is the main theme of the study of "Industrial Price Policies and Economic Progress" published this week by the Brookings Institution. The authors explain that they are not referring to price reductions obtained at the expense of labor, or by driving down the price of raw materials at the expense of farmers and other extractive workers. They are discussing reductions made possible by higher productivity, resulting from new technical processes, better equipment and improved organization.

It is their argument that sharing the gains of increased efficiency with consumers by progressive lowering of prices helps to stimulate and develop markets, and thereby contributes to "that general prosperity on which the given business itself will feed in the future." This is not a dogmatic assertion; it is a conclusion based upon extensive study of the pricing policies pursued by some of the country's most successful manufacturers, such as the heads of the leading automobile companies and manufacturers of agricultural implements.

Considerable space is devoted to discussion of the various ways in which large-scale production helps to lower production costs. To achieve these economies to the full, concerns must be able to operate close to capacity. "Only so," it is stated, "can they realize their potentialities for satisfying consumers' wants most fully and cheaply." The pricing policy of an industry is of paramount importance, however, in determining the scale of operations. Hence, examination of pricing policies with a view to determining their wisdom and suitability in a progressive economic society is a major aim of this study.

The economic advantages of large-scale production, especially from the manufacturer's viewpoint, have been discussed so often that even the present novel approach to an old subject adds little to existing knowledge. It should be noted in this connection that however great the purely economic gains derivable from large-scale production, there still remains a question as to its social desirability. The preservation of small business, even at economic cost to the community, may be regarded as in the public interest.

The Brookings study is, however, based upon acceptance of the thesis that elimination of the less by the more fit is the objective of a competitive, capitalistic system. The authors maintain that the large concerns of the present day are, despite their great size, engaged in a competitive struggle with one another and also with other industries seeking a share of the consumer's dollar. "The man who today tries to fence in an industrial highway and exact an exorbitant toll from those who would travel this road to consumer satisfaction is in danger of defeating himself" we are told. "Under modern conditions of technology, applied science is likely to find other methods of progress."

While that may be true in the very long run, the process of undermining the position of the price stabilizer who refuses to share the gains of technological progress may be intolerably delayed. For that reason, the discussion of the advantages to industry itself of dynamic price making is extremely illuminating. We are apt to assume that prices under competition are actually fixed in the market by offering goods for sale. This is not the method of procedure in the world of industry today. Goods are now produced under the supervision of executives who set a price objective in advance of offers to sell.

Dynamic pricing means prices made with a view to opening up new markets and exploiting new products and processes. Naturally this kind of pricing involves risks of loss due to miscalculations of cost, or failure of demand to materialize. Much of the present day emphasis upon production control and price stability is due to a growing unwillingness to take the risks of a dynamic policy of cutting prices to extend markets before the profitableness of the reduction has been tested.

A competitive economy is presumably based upon such risk taking. But many large as well as small concerns are increasingly indisposed to venture. The production-control efforts of trade associations and the attempts to raise prices under the NRA codes are examples of protective devices designed to protect weaker units against the full force of ordinary competitive risks. The Brookings study strongly indicates that mere bigness, far from mitigating the rigors of competition, may intensify the competitive struggle, and result in bringing more and better goods within the reach of the masses.

Whether we want to surrender the industrial field to a few industrial giants is, however, a question which the economist alone cannot answer. He can merely present some of the economic arguments in defense of size.

"Involuntary Emigrants."

The delegates of the 32 nations called to Evian to consider the problem of political refugees have adjourned for a fortnight.

At first glance, they have little in the way of concrete progress to look back upon. The good will manifested toward the unfortunate victims of Nazi persecution spent itself largely in talk. Strong resistance was manifested by all but a negligible few of the delegates to opening their country's gates to refugees. Yet it would be wrong to suggest that the Evian conference has been in vain. It has one very useful accomplishment to its credit. When the delegates reassemble in London they will be organized on a permanent rather than a temporary basis. And an American, it is understood, will then be named director of the new organization.

Both developments are of prime significance. In recognizing the refugee problem as enduring, the nations tacitly pledge themselves to do something about it. And the appointment of an American as director means that the United States will take an active part in a responsibility hitherto handled by the League of Nations unaided. This is not to suggest that the Nansen Office at Geneva will be superseded by the new intergovernmental committee, for the former's services are still needed. But it will give fresh strength to the whole refugee program at a moment when such reinforcement is sorely needed.

In view of current news from Italy it appears especially important that the committee has not limited itself strictly to consideration of what are politely termed "involuntary emigrants" from Germany and its new Austrian territory. At Mussolini's instigation, apparently, anti-Semitism may be made a governmental policy in a country which has been singularly free of that evil. It may well be that the Duce is more interested in stirring up the Arabs and thereby embarrassing Britain than in persecuting the handful of Italian Jews. But if Italy's action leads to an intensification of Arab opposition to Zionism it may also lead to the closing of one of the few places which during recent years has provided a haven for tens of thousands of refugees.

The growing total of homeless persons throughout the world presents a tremendous challenge to civilization's pretensions to compassion and co-operation. Pride, then, and satisfaction greet the reports that Myron Taylor, an American and characteristically a Quaker, is accorded large credit for the initial success of this new international effort.

An Admission Of Weakness.

The Japanese decision to give up the Olympic games that were scheduled to be held in Tokyo in 1940 reveals the degree of strain and desperation in which the island empire now labors as a result of the undeclared war on China.

Japan had long looked forward to playing host to the Olympic athletes of the world and the tens of thousands of visitors which the games were expected to bring to the Land of the Rising Sun. It was flattering to Japanese pride that their country had been singled out as the first Oriental nation to be awarded the games. The Tokyo Olympics were anticipated as another sign of Japan's coming of age. So the decision to cancel the games was not reached light-heartedly.

A contributing factor in the decision may have been the rising tide of sentiment in democratic lands against participation in the 1940 games because of the way in which Japan has acted toward China. The bombardment of unfortified Chinese cities, the barbarous conduct of Japanese troops at Nanking and elsewhere—such and similar actions contravened every canon of sportsmanship exemplified by the Olympic ideal. Thus many in this country and abroad have increasingly urged a boycott of the Tokyo games. Yet only this week a poll taken by the American Olympic Committee of athletic champions showed the great majority in favor of participation.

The basic reason for the cancellation of the Tokyo Olympics was financial stringency. With the war in China more than a year old and with the sought-for victory still very far from sight, Japan faces a period of increasing financial and economic difficulties. Every penny is needed for war purposes; little or nothing is left for peacetime activities, however desirable in themselves. Indeed, at the same time the Tokyo Olympics were canceled the proposed exposition in celebration of the 2500th anniversary of the foundation of the empire by Jimmu Tenno was also called off.

In embarking on her undeclared war on China, Japan clearly bit off more than she can chew. The action with respect to the Olympics constitutes an unwilling admission to the world that this is the case.

Telling A Marine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Ex-Marine No. 4" seems to think that hunger explains the Japanese attack on China. He says that each acre of arable land in Japan must supply food for three people. I fear he has been reading Japanese propaganda.

The Japanese food supply does not depend on Japan alone, but on Korea, Formosa and Manchuria, with a total area some four times that of Japan. The Japanese fishing fleets operate from the Philippines to Alaska and the catch is so abundant that the fishers complain of low prices. Rice is so abundant that importation is restricted. Authorities all agree that the Japanese standard of living has risen very greatly in the last generation. The Japanese deny that they have a lower standard of living than ours, though it is very different, being based on rice and fish rather than on wheat and pork. Naturally, the standard of living has gone down in the last five years in which the military expenditures have been pushed steadily upward till they reached 20 per cent of the total national income before the final conquest of China was begun a year ago.

There are some nations—for instance, the Chinese—whose people have sufficient character that, even if they are hungry, they do not try to steal their neighbor's territory. There are those who consider it particularly despicable to steal from people poorer than they are. There are also nations sufficiently enlightened to feel that they can gain more by peaceful trade than they can by conquest. The Japanese, however, are driven, not by economic necessity, but by lust for world power.

"Ex-Marine" has been asleep if he does not know that the isolationist pacifists have maintained for years a great lobbying organization which deluges Congress and the Executive with letters and telegrams every time that there is the slightest hint that Uncle Sam may show a little spunk in international affairs.

"Tax The Land Values."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To say that the political situation in this country is hopeless is rather too pessimistic, but there is certainly much room for improvement. The discouraged writer in The Post of July 11 does, I think, suggest a very basic remedy for the widespread dependency that seems ever growing worse. "Tax the land values" comes nearer to universal justice than anything else which is in any measure practicable.

Land is the origin and basis of all material values, from which it must be evident that the taxing of land in accordance with its sale value would be only a matter of justice. Since land is the origin of every other material thing, those who do not own land must pay for every product which they need or desire for any purpose, so that the final consumer pays all the taxes. Exception made for any purpose whatsoever is favoring a special interest which maintains the "Let someone else pay" mental attitude.

With reference to real estate used by the Government, it would be only a matter of accounting, and largely such accounting would be very desirable, as it would give a very much truer idea of the status of each activity, so that the average citizen could better understand how he is being served by the Government which he is compelled to support. The same rule should hold with religious, charitable and educational property, since their release from tax simply forces others, with or without their consent, to pay the surcharge.

Out of the ground comes all material wealth and it is the ground that should pay all taxes, for it is the ultimate consumer who does and should pay, but only in the measure in which he is profited. It is safe to say that greed, laziness and hypocrisy can never be legislated out of existence, but fair-minded people should at least make persistent effort to reduce their influence to the minimum.

LOIS CHRISTENSEN.

Pioneers Vs. Late-Comers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your notice to readers that Westbrook Pegler will be back in the Post shortly reminds me that recently he wrote a column entitled "No Class B Americans," which was to the effect that no class of Americans is better than another merely because their ancestors got here first.

Strictly from the point of view of logic he is right, and, anyway, the best course for us all, since we have admitted so many foreigners, is to make them welcome and make good Americans out of them.

However, Pegler overlooks the fact that no amount of logic can make those of us whose ancestors did come over 300 years ago like some types of foreigner who comes to America. They may outvote us and even govern us but we don't have to like them.

And the logic in our point of view is this: Our ancestors had the guts to come to America from their comfortable English villages, for an ideal. They came to a wilderness, starved, fought Indians and disease and knew every hardship and privation man can know. Three hundred years later immigrants came to America from villages where they were starving to death, and where they didn't have the skill or guts to survive. They come to a land of wealth and leisure and luxury, not for an ideal, but to take advantage of what was made ready for them by others.

Are not the descendants of the old pioneers entitled, at least, to the satisfaction of knowing that their ancestors were such hardy men and not the outcasts of European civilization? With that in mind we may be justified in looking down on some of our recent acquisitions to citizenship who came here just because the wages paid in America won their loyalty away from their home lands.

Want Ball, Not Politics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will you please tell me why it is necessary to have the President's speech broadcast from two Washington radio stations, cutting off the radio broadcast of the baseball game in order to bring the talk?

If anyone wants to hear the speech they can certainly tune in the other station. Let those that would rather hear the game hear it.

Don't the radio stations realize that perhaps some of us would rather hear the game than all this campaign hot air? It is certainly disappointing to get all set for an afternoon of exciting ball and then have the announcer come in with the statement, "We will discontinue the game broadcast while the President speaks."

With both Washington stations broadcasting the speech we were compelled to listen or else turn the radio off, which is just what I did.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I object, yes a thousand times object, in the name of every kid on vacation, high in the mountains or down in the valleys in their camps, the lone cowboy out on the golf links; I object in the name of the fellows without jobs standing by, I object in the name of the boys at Walter Reed, at Mount Alto, at Fort Myer's Hospital; I object in the name of all the citizens of Washington and surrounding neighborhood; yes, sir I object to having the radio broadcast of our ball game called off in order that some politician can gas up the air with a lot of hooey—and that on the hottest day of the year!

Lend-Spend Precedents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few weeks ago an editorial in the New York Herald Tribune referred to Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" and observed that if one had recently read that work attentively he would be sufficiently informed about the last 25 years of our history.

We are almost startled when we think of all the patriotism and genius which have been employed by the greatest men that America has produced to develop our system of constitutional Government, and then contemplate the ignominy of descending to the motto, "Lend, Spend." The motto should embrace one more word. It should be "Lend, Spend, Corrupt." Corruption is an inseparable incident of that scheme of government.

The popular appeal in the motto, "Lend, Spend," is obviously based on the mass appeal in the contention that the very wealthy should be less wealthy and the very poor less poor. The masses know that the Government must get the money to lend and spend from the citizens who have accumulated, and they know that when it passes through Government channels, the money is going to reach those who have votes.

There is a strong argument against excessive individual wealth that I do not recall seeing stressed by Government administrators engaged in redistributing wealth, or by the beneficiaries of the distribution, which is that excessive individual accumulations tempt governments to make excessive levies of wealth, the use of which enfeebles and corrupts government, a result so inevitable that the individual accumulation may be regarded as part of the proximate cause of the Government abuse.

If we choose to enlarge the editor's historic review, and refer to an earlier period than that covered by Gibbon, we may contemplate the history of Babylon in connection with the lending-spending scheme of government, and view anew Belshazzar's feast.

Allred's Reward.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the story of the triumphal tour where so many "old friends" were greeted and blessed by the chief bestower of political blessings, the stop-over in Texas overshadowed all the rest. The Lone Star State rated the attention it got, and it was just too bad that Mr. Garner's fishing kept him from sharing a moiety of the dazzling spotlight.

Texas has long been celebrated for the deeds of its famous sons, and the names of Sam Houston, Stephen F. Austin and Mirabeau Lamar are deathless, and will continue to echo down time's corridors. It is erroneous, however, to think that the ancient race of giants of the Southwest has vanished and left only pygmies. In clear disproof there stands forth Jimmy Allred, Texas' chief executive, a splendid young knight in shining armor, ready to do battle against all New Deal enemies.

"There sounds not to the trump of fame
The echo of a nobler name."

Was it not this same youthful champion of the underdog who came out boldly in favor of a third term for Franklin, along with half a dozen other governors? True, he was a little shy of the adoration of Gov. Earle, who admitted that he was only "knee high" to the most exalted, yet the Texan's statement sufficed, and it bore golden interest in the presentation of a Federal judgeship in his home town, an unexpected reward.

Some thought that the compensation was a trifle niggardly; that the transcendent merit of the lad really called for a seat on the bench of the Nation's highest tribunal. But the grouchers were few; Jamesie was the hero of the hour; Maury Maverick, Marvin Jones, Hatton Summers and other small fry got only also-ran mention, and a good time was had by all.

The Post Impressionist

McGonnigle As Nursemaid.

"I AM constantly being amazed," said McGonnigle, "at the latent possibilities and capacities I discover within myself."

"I have always considered you a man of great versatility and many accomplishments," I assured him.

"That I am," he agreed. "And today I have discovered that I have abilities along a line which I had never before considered. You behold before you the model nursemaid, the tamer of hitherto untamed animals, and the guide and guardian of the awakening infantile intellect."

"How did you happen to discover all these accomplishments?"

"My sister has recently moved to Washington with her three children. I have of course been to see them a number of times, and I have been appalled by the wild confusion, the noisy chaos, the raging bedlam of that household. Both my sister and her husband make no attempt to discipline the children, and they are nothing less than untamed savages."

"I remember some of your hair-raising reports on the family," I told him. "Don't the children ordinarily amuse themselves by belaboring each other with clubs and bludgeons, gouging each other's eyes, biting, kicking and similar forms of pleasure?"

"That isn't the half of it," McGonnigle replied. "You would have to see them really in action to appreciate what bloodthirsty hoodlums they are. Well, the nursemaid had the day off, and my sister simply had to go down town to do some shopping. Would I mind terribly if she asked me to stay with the children for the afternoon? She assured me that they would not cause me the slightest trouble and that I could spend the afternoon reading and sipping mint juleps."

"And you fell for that?" I asked incredulously.

"Yes, I did. I felt sorry for my sister and thought that after all it would be a totally new experience for me to pass the afternoon with three children all under the age of 6. I had one of the most pleasant and stimulating afternoons of my life."

"How did you manage it? Did you chloroform the children?"

"Not at all. As soon as their mother left I took all three to the bathroom and removed approximately a quart of blackberry jam from their hands and faces. Then I put Jay-Bird in his cage, for he was supposed to have a nap immediately after his luncheon bottle. He howled like a demented beast for a few minutes, but when he found that I paid no attention to him he fell asleep at once.

"Then I took Eebie and Day-Day to the living room and invited them to sit beside me on the divan. They were amazed, but they seated themselves and waited for developments. I asked them how they liked living in Washington. That brought forth a flood of impassioned oratory. Eebie declared that she liked 'Washing Machine,' as she calls it, better than Heaven, because there are such big bears and such clever monkeys in the Zoo. Then they gave me a minute description of every animal in the Zoo. After they had exhausted that subject they began on me. Have you ever been much with little children?"

"No," I answered.

"Well, they have an amazing ability to ask questions which probe the very depths of your soul. The only trouble with children is that they are completely and coldly logical. They go on the assumption that there is a reason for everything. They brush aside all our specious rationalizations and strike out boldly for the fundamental truths. The nearest approach we have to a modern Socrates is a 5-year-old child. We like to say that we can't answer children's questions because they are too young to understand our answers, but the truth of the matter is that we can't answer them simply because we don't know the answers or are unwilling to admit them to ourselves if we do. How is this for a Socratic dialogue?

"'Why don't you have any little children, Uncle Mac?'

"'Because I'm not married, Day-Day.'

"'Why aren't you married?'

"'Why haven't you found anyone you really want to marry?'

"And there you are. To answer that question would require a month of honest soul-searching, and I am too much of a coward to embark on it, for I know that finding the answer would make me face a lot of unpleasant truths about myself and would sadly deflate my ego."

"Just to satisfy my curiosity, how did you answer that question?" I asked.

"I didn't. I proposed that we have some toast and milk, and that diverted their attention. So I presided at an infants' tea party, and the little ones conducted themselves with perfect decorum. The whole question of child management is to treat them exactly as your equals, as I explained to my sister when she returned and expressed her astonishment at the peace and quiet that reigned throughout the house."

McGonnigle lapsed into a thoughtful silence.

"What are you thinking about?" I asked.

"Why haven't I found anyone I really want to marry?"

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

An Interview With Howard Hughes.

Q. Mr. Hughes, how does it seem to be back in New York?
A. Terrible. I'll have to stand for stop lights again.
Q. Did you enjoy your trip around the world?
A. I don't know when I enjoyed three or four days so much.

* * * *

Q. Were you satisfied with the results?
A. Not completely. I hated the dillydallying.
Q. What dillydallying, Mr. Hughes?
A. I had to stop for gas, didn't I?
Q. Not necessarily.
A. What do you mean "not necessarily?"
Q. A good many people think you could fly without gas. Have you ever thought of trying it?
A. No; but I've often thought I might have to.

* * * *

Q. What impressed you most on the trip around the world?
A. The way those continents look when they're spinning.
Q. Is it true that when you fly the Atlantic at such speed it seems like a canal?
A. Let's not exaggerate. The World's Fair publicity department will take care of that end.

* * * *

Q. What was the attitude of people in the various countries over which you passed?
A. They seemed quite surprised that such a big plane could be flying over peaceful cities in such great haste with no desire to bomb noncombatants.

* * * *

Q. What was the hardest part of the flight?
A. Pronouncing those Siberian mountain ranges and explaining to the people of Omsk and Yakutsk what the words "New York World's Fair 1939" meant.
Q. Did you succeed?
A. No. They still thought it was a greeting from Roosevelt, Roper or Ickes.

* * * *

Q. Were you at any time nervous?
A. Yes. Several times I was afraid we were going so slow we could be seen by the naked eye.

* * * *

Q. Why did you carry so much ham on the trip?
A. Ham is the ideal food for a week-end picnic.
Q. On your trip, what opinion did you form of world conditions?
A. The only way world conditions look good is when you fly over them at such speed you can't see much.

* * * *

Q. Do you think around-the-world flights will soon be common?
A. I see no reason why there shouldn't presently have to be special traffic laws governing east and west bound traffic.

* * * *

Q. One more question, Mr. Hughes. Do you think the airplaine has come to stay?
A. Yes. But not to STAY too long on any one spot.
Q. Thank you, Mr. Hughes, and remember your promise.
A. What promise?
Q. To let us know when you get ready for that trip twice around the world upside down, nonstop.

Love a la Carte.

My love is fair and gold of hair
And silken is her gown;
And on her finger is a ring,
And on her brow a frown.

My love is fair and debonair,
Her eyes are wide and clear,
And in her hair she wears a rose,
And on her lips a sneer.

My love is fair; her baby stare
Is plainly meant to grieve me;
The such and such—she eats too much!
And yet she'll not believe me.

Writing A Best-Seller

By Allan Keller

Miss Mitchell's Experiences.

MARGARET MITCHELL wrote the last chapter of "Gone With the Wind" first and then went back to write the earlier chapters, she said in her first interview in New York.

She never altered a word in that last chapter. Ten years later when the book finally reached the hands of the publisher it was unchanged.

"When I finished that chapter," she said, "I jumped right into the middle of the book and did the siege of Atlanta. There was no pattern. When I got up in the morning I wrote about reconstruction if I felt that way, or I wrote about the war if I felt like it."

As she described the writing of the 1,000-page book which has sold 1,690,000 copies in 12 languages it seemed quite simple. Only when her blue eyes dropped and her tiny hands trembled as she mentioned the long years of hammering at the typewriter and the months of research was there any hint of the arduous labor that attended the creation of the characters b Scarlett O'Hara, Rhett Butler, Ashley Wilkes and the others.

* * * *

"THE LAST CHAPTER went kind of easy," said Miss Mitchell. "Here and there other chapters did. The choosing of the title was a nightmare. I sold the book without a title and they asked me to think one up. I was in despair when I happened to be reading the line from Ernest Dowson's poem that goes like this:

"'I have forgot much, Cynara, gone with the wind,
"'Flung roses, roses, riotously with the throng.'

"And there was the title. It really wasn't so hot."

* * * *

FOR SIX MONTHS after the rights were sold Miss Mitchell said she couldn't open the front door without "18 Scarletts falling in."

"It was pathetic," she said. "Little girls spent their last money to get to Atlanta to see me. They told me they knew in their heart they were the real ones for the part."

* * * *

"GONE WITH THE WIND" was published two years ago, and the months since then, she said, have been months of torment, mixed with joy beyond comprehension. Imposters have taken her name in vain. Cranks have demanded her indorsement for the part in the movies or for autographed copies of the book.

One woman in a Midwestern city went into a bookstore, said she was Margaret Mitchell, and offered to co-operate in an "autograph tea." The publisher placed ads in the paper but became suspicious.

"He called us long-distance at 2 in the morning," chortled the author. "He asked John—my husband—if his wife was at home, and John said yes. I could hear the man say, 'My God, then whom do I have here?'"

Steamboat Whistles

Among the forgotten arts—that is, we suppose it is forgotten—is the making of steamboat whistles which sound different notes or have such individual qualities that each is distinct from its fellows. It used to be that every roustabout on the landing, when he heard a whistle blow, would say "There's the Bonanza coming round the bend," or "That's the Golden Rule."

In the days when more than 50 steamboats came and went, the rivermen could tell unerringly the approaching vessel by the sound of its whistle. To our untutored ears, the mighty voices of the boats on the river all sound alike. They make us think of the bellowings of the leviathan. Perhaps to the captains and pilots and to the roustabouts, they still tell their story, but to the rest of us they are merely distant sounds.

Walter Lippmann

Lack Of Financial Reserve And Job Security Blamed For Loss Of Personal Liberty.

Paris, July 15.

WE LIVE IN A TIME when great masses of civilized men have either voluntarily surrendered their personal liberties or at least have submitted without serious protest or resistance to the destruction of their liberties. It is important that we should understand the causes. This is not too difficult. For while a library of books might profitably be written on the subject, one fundamental aspect of the question at least is clear enough to anyone who passes back and forth between the totalitarian and the free nations of Europe.

LIPPMANN.

It is that the peoples who have lost their civil rights had previously lost or had never obtained the means of economic independence for individuals, families and local communities. It is very clear, I think, that the masses who have fallen under the spell of demagogic dictators and their terroristic bands were recruited from individuals who had no property, no savings, and either no job at all or a job which they could not feel sure of holding. They were in the exact sense of the term proletarians even if they happened to be earning fairly high salaries at the moment. For they had no reserves to fall back upon. They could not afford to lose their jobs. They could not afford, therefore, to speak their minds or to take any risks, to be in any real sense of the word individual citizens. They had to be servile or they starved. Wherever a dictatorship has been set up in Europe, the mass of individuals had already become so insecure that they no longer dared to exercise the legal liberties that the demagogue was attacking.

Man Should Be Able To Change His Job

TO HAVE ECONOMIC independence a man must be in a position to leave one job and go to another; he must have enough savings of some kind to exist for a considerable time without accepting the first job offered. Thus the peasant for all his poverty and the exploitation which he suffers is relatively to his own needs still the freest man in central Europe. The fact that he can exist by his own labor on his own piece of land gives him an independence which every dictatorial regime, except the Russian perhaps, has been forced to respect.

But the industrial worker who has a choice between working in one factory and not working at all, the white collar intellectuals who compete savagely for the relatively few private positions and for posts in the bureaucracy—these are the people who live too precariously to exercise their liberties or to defend them. They have no savings. They have only their labor to sell, and there are very few buyers of their labor. Therefore, they have only the choice of truckling to the powerful or of perishing heroically but miserably. Men like these, having none of the substance of liberty themselves, have scant respect for any law or any form of civil rights.

The reason the love of liberty, as we understand it in America, is so strong in France is undoubtedly, it seems to me, that France still is a country where the great mass of the people have their own farms, their own shops, their own little business enterprises and some savings for a rainy day and an emergency. This is the solid foundation of French liberty. The French electorate, except perhaps in a few industrial centers, is not a frightened crowd, but a collection of independent families, stubbornly attracted to their farms, shops, homes and bank accounts.

They Are Not Easy To Terrorize

THEY ARE NOT EASY to terrorize, because they have reserves for their independence. They have resistance to mass propaganda because they have so much independence as individuals. And that is why they have such a dread of inflation, which would destroy their individual savings, and such a dislike of monopoly and the concentrating of big business, which would make them the hirelings of a single master.

The more I see of Europe the more deeply convinced do I become that the preservation of freedom in America, or anywhere else, depends upon maintaining and restoring for the great majority of individuals the economic means to remain independent individuals. The greatest evil of the modern world is the reduction of the people to a proletarian level by destroying their savings, by depriving the helpless employes of a private monopoly or of government monopoly. At that point they are no longer citizens. They are a mob. For when the people lose this sense of their separate and individual security, they cease to be individuals. They are absorbed into a mass. Their liberties are already lost and they are a frightened crowd ready for a master.

Though the actual measures to be taken are debatable, the objective for a free government is, I think, clear. It should use its authority to enable the independent farmer, the small and moderate-sized enterprise, the small saver, to survive. It should use its authority to see that large enterprise is no larger than technology requires, depriving big business of corporate privileges and other forms of legal and economic advantage which make it bigger than on economic grounds it needs to be. A resolute democracy should favor the dispersion of industry rather than its concentration, and it should favor the rise in as many communities as possible of different kinds of enterprise rather than a high degree of specialization on some one product.

For unless the means of independence are widely distributed among the people themselves, no real resistance is possible to the advance of tyranny. The experience of Europe shows clearly that when a nation becomes proletarian, the result is not, as the Communists taught, a dictatorship by the proletariat but a dictatorship over the proletariat.

'The Rock'

By Barnet Nover

Britain Remembers Gibraltar.

THE COMMITTEE of Imperial Defense, Sir John Simon told the House of Commons on Thursday, is reviewing "the whole situation of the strategical position of Gibraltar in the light of recent events in Spain and the Strait of Gibraltar."

This should not be surprising. The defense of Gibraltar, western gateway to the Mediterranean, has been a prime consideration of British military and naval policy since "The Rock" was acquired in 1704. And though more vulnerable than it was in the past, because of the development of the bombing plane and long-range artillery, Gibraltar's strategic importance remains considerable.

Indeed, were it in the hands of an unfriendly power, Great Britain would no longer dominate the short route to India and the East as she has done for so many years. That is a possibility which no British statesman can view with equanimity.

WHAT IS SURPRISING about Sir John's statement is that it comes two years after the outbreak of the Spanish civil war and many months after well-substantiated rumors began to appear that behind Gibraltar and in Spanish Morocco on the other side of the Strait, Germans and Italians were building a ring of fortifications threatening Britain's great base.

From this one of two conclusions must be drawn. The first is that the British authorities have not kept themselves informed as to what was going on in Spain and particularly in the vicinity of Gibraltar. But this is absurd on the face of it. It must, therefore, be assumed that, while knowing of the developing threat to Gibraltar, the London government did not care to do anything about it. In other words while Mr. Chamberlain and his colleagues may be exonerated of the charge of closing their eyes regarding Spain they stand accused of having tied their hands and feet.

INDEED there is no better commentary on the Chamberlain government's Spanish policy than the present alarms over Gibraltar and the efforts now being made to woo Portugal.

Though the oldest of Britain's allies, Portugal has recently been veering more and more toward Italy and Germany. That has been the result of several factors. The present Portuguese government is a dictatorship and thus has a fellow feeling for the other totalitarian states. Then Portugal, like Italy and Germany, wants no left-wing government dominating Spain. The repercussions of such a development in Portugal might prove fatal to the Salazar dictatorship. And, as a supplementary consideration, there is the possibility that by playing ball with Hitler and Mussolini, Portugal might ward off the seizure of Portugal's valuable but largely undeveloped colonies.

Lisbon's friendliness toward Berlin and Rome, however, constitutes a real danger to Great Britain. In the event of a war between that country and Germany or Italy or both, Portugal's harbors might be used as submarine bases for an attack on British shipping using either the Mediterranean or the Cape of Good Hope routes. Similarly Portugal's air bases might be put at the disposal of Britain's enemy.

The British government has therefore deemed it essential to woo Portugal, with loans, arms shipments, military advisers and so on.

THIS IS A SENSIBLE procedure in view of the present situation. But it makes little or no sense when put side by side with Britain's Spanish policy during the past two years. For every consideration operating to favor a close working arrangement between Great Britain and Portugal also operates in favor a close working arrangement between Great Britain and an independent Spain. And yet for two whole years Great Britain has acted in a manner to create the assumption that what happened in Spain was of no significance to the British, indeed, that it was to Britain's interests to favor, tacitly if not actively, the victory of the side in the Spanish civil war that was backed by Mussolini and Hitler.

To be sure apologists for Mr. Chamberlain have argued that, after all, there was no need to worry. Whatever happened, it was said, Spain would remain Spanish, German and Italian intervention constituting no permanent threat to Spain's territorial integrity but would automatically end once Franco became master of the entire country.

SUSH AN ARGUMENT happens to fly in the face of history. Gibraltar, once taken by the British, remained British. Similarly it may prove beyond Spain's capacity to force the Italians out of the Balearics, the Germans out of Ceuta and the Basque coast. At any rate, Great Britain did not in the past take so complacent a view of Spanish possibilities.

In her excellent study, "The Lost British Policy," Barbara Wertheim points out how, again and again, in the course of more than 200 years, Great Britain took the position that any development tending to give any third power, whether it was France or Austria-Hungary or Germany, a foothold in Spain had to be opposed by every force at Britain's command. In Napoleon's day, for instance, Great Britain supported the popular uprising against the French invaders. For it was recognized that Gibraltar was the key to the Mediterranean, but that Gibraltar would become valueless once Spain became a satellite of some third power. As Charles James Fox argued in a speech on December 5, 1782, in which he berated the government of his day for its weak-kneed policy in language which might today be used by Winston Churchill or Anthony Eden:

"To cajole an enemy is surely not the way a powerful and wise nation would seek their security . . . Give up to Spain the fortress of Gibraltar and the Mediterranean becomes to them a pool, a pond in which they can navigate at pleasure and act without control or check. Deprive yourself of this station, and the states of Europe which border the Mediterranean, will not longer look to you for the maintenance of the free navigation of that sea, and having it no longer in your power to be useful, you cannot expect alliances. The honorable gentleman talks of the cession of the most important fortress on a principle the most delusive. Because it is a possession dear to the enemy, the object of their ambition and their pride, he would yield it to them as a means of preventing future wars . . . If you govern yourselves by this maxim, there will be no end to cession, because there will be no end to desire . . ."

Summertime Guests

Farm Wife's Plea.

I WOULD LIKE to say that there are hundreds of hard-working, kind-hearted and hospitable country farm wives who are greatly imposed upon every summer by city friends and acquaintances. This imposition consists of frequent week-long visits by rest-seeking folks whose sole thought is an escape from work and worry.

If these city folks are so much as asked whether they like the country or not, they usually reply in the negative. However, they like it well enough to spend weeks of leisure time there, without an offer to pay for their entertainment and they expect to be served the best food that can be had. These same people would not dare to impose upon any city friend in this way. Why do they expect to make door mats out of country people. We have feelings, but lack the courage to refuse to be trampled upon by hosts of visitors. Where are the manners and consideration of these supposedly well-bred city folks who are too good to help with country chores or house work, but who don't mind a morning nap until 9 o'clock and an extra breakfast.

Extra meals and irregular hours are an added annoyance when much work has to be done. Farm wives have to wait until these late meals are over before starting their regular work. I know several families at this time where the mother is on the verge of a breakdown because of the hosts of uninvited city people who come in upon her and stay weeks at a time without giving her a cent for her trouble. May this awaken some sleeping city people!

WHEN President Roosevelt—no, it was not President Roosevelt, it was Head-of-the-Democratic-Party Roosevelt—when he began to separate party sheep from party goats, he let himself in for some awkward experiences. One of them results in a gently amusing comedy in California.

SULLIVAN.

In California Senator William G. McAdoo, running for renomination, is classified by Mr. Roosevelt as one of the sheep, and therefore to be saved. Some weeks ago Mr. Roosevelt gave the Senator a letter, fondly addressed "Dear Mac," which amounted to an expression of the wish that the Democrats of California should renominate Mr. McAdoo.

Now Mr. McAdoo has opponents. One of them is Sheridan Downey. About Mr. Downey I know nothing except that he is described as a "Townsendite" and as having run on the ticket with Socialist Upton Sinclair in 1934, when Mr. Sinclair and his "EPIC" captured the Democratic Party in California.

Whatever may be Mr. Downey's economic heresies, he is a good dialectitian; he knows the art of political disputation. He has gone back and dug up records—records of himself and of Mr. McAdoo in their relation to Mr. Roosevelt at the time when Mr. Roosevelt was first a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Mr. Downey shows that he was an original Roosevelt man. He was for Mr. Roosevelt "B. C."—that is, he was for Mr. Roosevelt "before Chicago," before the convention of 1932. Mr. Downey reprints speeches he made at that time, in which he described Mr. Roosevelt as a "man of destiny" and strongly advocated nomination of him by the Democrats.

Downey Resurrects McAdoo's Words In '32.

THEN, in a parallel column, Candidate Downey reprints what Senator McAdoo was saying about Mr. Roosevelt at that time. Senator McAdoo was not for Mr. Roosevelt—he was against him. Mr. McAdoo was for Garner, and he described Garner in terms invidious to Mr. Roosevelt, as in a speech on April 20, 1932:

". . . Garner didn't learn farming on the sidewalks of New York nor in the Wall Street banking houses. Nor did he learn how to labor with his hands in Harvard University or in esthetic surroundings."

"Tammany has not yet announced which one of her favorite sons, Roosevelt or Smith, the tiger will champion at Chicago."

Candidate Downey does not confine himself to resurrecting 6-year-old speeches. He goes after Senator McAdoo, and inferentially Mr. Roosevelt, on another line. He has dug up that message Mr. Roosevelt sent to Congress saying that some Supreme Court justices were too old. From that disquisition by Mr. Roosevelt on the disabilities of age, Candidate Downey quotes:

"This brings forward the question of aged or infirm judges—a subject of delicacy and yet one which requires frank discussion. . . . The modern tasks of judges call for the use of full energies. Modern complexities call also for a constant infusion of new blood in the courts, just as it is needed in executive functions of the Government and in private business."

Then candidate Downey prints some pertinent vital statistics about Senator McAdoo. He shows that the Senator was born October 31, 1863, and therefore, if re-elected, will be 75 when he begins his term and 81 when he ends it.

To Democratic Leader, McAdoo's Age Unimportant.

BUT DOUBTLESS this is explained by Mr. Roosevelt's division of himself into two personalities. Doubtless it was President Roosevelt who said that Supreme Court justices over 70 were too old. And doubtless it is the other personality, Head-of-the-Democratic-Party Roosevelt, who thinks that Mr. McAdoo at 75 to 81 would be a perfectly spry Senator.

As for Candidate Downey's other plaint, he will on reflection conclude that Mr. Roosevelt's support of Senator McAdoo is based on sound reasoning. True, it was Mr. Downey who was for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932. But that cause of gratitude from Mr. Roosevelt is six years old. On the other hand, Mr. Roosevelt's cause for gratitude to Senator McAdoo is quite recent—it was within the past year that Senator McAdoo supported Mr. Roosevelt's court reform proposal, and otherwise did what Mr. Roosevelt wished.

The rule appears to be: Between two obligations of gratitude, live up to the most recent.

The Federal Diary

Former service men comprise more than 80 per cent of the guard force in Government buildings in Washington, says Interior Department's branch of buildings management. They probably will be very much interested in a meeting of the Disabled American Veterans Wednesday night at the District Building, when charges of discrimination against wounded veterans will be aired. Seventeen of the alleged victims will be present.

It has been claimed that veterans capable of doing some kinds of work have been excluded from Government employment on grounds of unfitness for any work at all. Inasmuch as the veterans probably are the most strongly organized minority in America, we look forward—if there is any truth in the complaints—to seeing some excitement.

A joint meeting of Commerce and Treasury Locals of U. F. W. A. in the Commerce Auditorium was enlivened the other day when Robert Sherman, of Commerce, introduced President Harry B. Mitchell, of the Civil Service Commission; E. J. Gardner, chief of Commerce's division of personnel, had just finished speaking.

Sherman went on at some length in praise of Mitchell. Mitchell had kindly consented to speak . . . Mitchell was a great friend of civil service . . . Mitchell this and Mitchell that . . . all of it justified, of course, but the climax came when he announced in crescendo: "And now it gives me great pleasure to introduce the president of the Civil Service Commisison, Mr. Gardner."

We hear that a certain department is so interested in the success of its baseball team that it caused the transfer from Panama to Washington of a star ball player.

Edgar G. Brown, president of the United Government Workers, declared yesterday that "Friday, July 15, 1938, will long remain a red letter day in the lives of 2,000 men and women laborers and elevator operators in Uncle Sam's army. These workers were in the class of the forgotten until the organization of the United Government Employes two years ago."

Q.—Why all the fuss?

A.—Yesterday began the $120 per annum increase in the pay of these employes who were thus jumped from $1,080 to $1,200. About 100 skilled laborers (window washers and mechanics) were advanced to $1,260.

Charles A. Peters, jr., assistant director of the National Park Service, will be guest speaker at U. G. E.'s "second $150,000 victory pay increase celebration for postoffice, bureau and National Park Service workers," which will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at Garnett-Patterson Junior High School auditorium.

The plan for a summer camp for Government employes and their families has been abandoned for this year, says Matthew C. Huppuch, on the Park Service Recreational Demonstration Projects group.

However, a special camp, to be built near Washington, is projected for next summer. Cottages and a central dining hall, swimming pools and athletic fields are planned. A nominal charge will be imposed for living quarters and meals.

And still reports of cruises keep coming in. There must be something about the Potomac this time of year . . . The West Virginia State Society, of Washington, will sponsor an excursion on the S. S. City of Washington of the Wilson Line Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. John L. Bateman, of 806 Maryland avenue northeast, is the secretary.

Examining Board For Barbers Named

Members of the Board of Barber Examiners were appointed yesterday by the District Commissioners to license and regulate barber shops here. The bill creating the board was passed by Congress last month.

Savious Sidotti, recommended by the Associated Master Barbers of America, was appointed for a three-year term and designated president. Tony J. Durso, recommended by the Journeymen Barbers Union, was appointed for two years, and Richard R. Atkinson, one year.

Board members will be paid $8 a day for time actually spent in their duties. Later a clerk and three inspectors will be appointed to the board. Inspectors, having five years of barbering experience here, will be chosen by competitive examination.

Wife and Children Sick, Police Hunt WPA Messenger

Because his wife and one of his children are sick, police were asked yesterday to locate William Raymond Jeffords, 29, a WPA messenger, who disappeared Monday from his home near Southern avenue and Benning road northeast.

Jeffords' father, William Jeffords, told police his son had been worried over his wife's illness for some time. The day of his disappearance, police were told, Jeffords sold a car for a friend for $60, and in addition had with him a check for $65.

Meetings will be held Monday through Friday in Room 10, Stockton Hall.

"THE SHEIK." Paramount's picturization of the novel by E. M. Hull, starring Rudolf Valentino, with Agnes Ayres, Adolphe Menjou, Lucien Littlefield, Walter Long and others. Directed by George Melford. A reissue. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Columbia Theater.

Whether he simmers in Purgatory, strums a golden harp or is absorbed in the great nothingness of our atheistic friends, one thing is sure—Rudolf Valentino is still box-office in this world. His "The Sheik" filled the Columbia Theater yesterday afternoon, drew applause at its finish.

While the years have bestowed elements of the comic valentine on "The Sheik," time fails to sap the essential vigor of this smash hit of too many seasons ago. Chromo though it is in the cinema gallery, it captured the spirit of humanity's popular illusion about the ruthless and conquering lover. You'll get no end of laughs out of its dated lines and Rudy's flamboyant necking technique, but there's plenty of vitality in the old celluloid yet.

How romance turns to farce in a few years flared up strongly in subtitles. When Agnes Ayres, after being kidnaped to the Sheik's tent, whimpered, "Why have you brought me here?" the audience giggled loudly; repeated when Valentino answered "Aren't you woman enough to know?" Even funnier was Rudy's reply to her statement that her English friends would rescue her. Leering cutely, he said, "You will not be missed until it is too late."

Valentino Still Lives.

But people will go to see "The Sheik" because of Valentino. It is pleasant to be able to say that the personality of Rudolf Valentino is one of those things that justifies the judgment of the public, may survive even our little generation. This Italian lad who lived as a gardener, bus boy, indifferent night club dancer, finally as a movie star—and who died like a prince in the full flight of a remarkable career that had probably reached its height—after all, was quite a fellow. Our judgment is that all women liked him because he liked all women, honestly, if only for the moment. He was a bit like India's eternally young god Krishna, embodied in flesh by a miracle strange as that of the Dionne quintuplets. His smile is still like fireworks—those preposterous eyes he makes, well, girls, let's blame them on Director George Melford. He can't talk back, for the time being.

Not only women's fashions but men's swing a mean backfire in "The Sheik." Agnes Ayres' hair-do makes her look strangely mature, when she must have been quite young; but that belted-back suit, worn by Adolphe Menjou, that hangs away down to here, is just as funny as any of Miss Ayres' vintage evening frocks or fantastic parasols. On the other hand, Miss Ayres still looks like a million dollars in riding clothes. Showing that a good sports outfit never goes wrong.

The Younger Menjou.

One must return to Mr. Menjou to do justice to "The Sheik." Our Adolphe is cast as a Parisian novelist, who persuades Sheik Ahmed (Valentino) that the strategy of love should not involve sheer combat (though that's the idea of the picture). Adolph has the darndest Parisian moustache, looks like Chateau Lafiette 1892, has a faintly unwholesome Proustian air, exudes chivalry like perspiration and with the same result—ah, let's stop. Adolphe has long ago made up for all that, with more than that. "The Sheik" should give him a laugh and a sigh.

For all this, "The Sheik" is not trivial. It brings back memories, laughs, faint qualms, to us of the older generation. To the younger, we are sure, it will bring a quickened beat of the aorta, a realization that life is not a single reel, but a serial.

There's a musical short, and comic cartoon, "Robinson Crusoe," that'll make you glad you made tracks for the Columbia—besides your top reason for wondering what this Valentino person was like, in his habit, as he lived. The difficulty is that he hasn't died—for this generation.

Palace

That a motion picture need not be huge in physical dimensions to score an unequivocal success is conclusively demonstrated by "The Shopworn Angel," which entered its second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater yesterday.

Here is a subject that survives among the season's most engrossing studies in sound human impulses and reactions, not only by virtue of the soundness of its arguments but also by the skill with which those arguments are expressed by the three able players cast in the principal roles. These pivotal characters are a naive and bewildered young American doughboy, recruited from the plains of Texas; a New York showgirl and the wealthy young Broadwayite who "angels" her productions and entertains an abiding love for her away from the stage. The play resolves itself naturally and inevitably into a triangular pattern of opposing viewpoints, backgrounds and aspirations.

Into these three vital roles Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has projected three ideally chosen players in the gifted persons of James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan and Walter Pidgeon. The role of the Texas rookie is perfectly tailored to the Stewart measurements and Miss Sullavan makes clear again that she is to be reckoned with among the cinema's most able actresses. Walter Pidgeon takes on new stature as an actor by the sincerity and clean-cut worth of his impersonation of the least sympathetic figure in the drama.

There are musical interpolations in "The Shopworn Angel" that add to the variety and appeal of the action and subordinate roles are cleverly assumed by Hattie McDaniel, as the maid; Nat Pendleton, Sam Levene and Alan Curtis.

Supplementary features that also are carried over include Robert Benchley's humorous short-reel, "How to Raise a Baby;" Pete Smith's latest release in the "Crime Does Not Pay" series, and the new issue of the "News of the Day."

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Always Goodbye' and Stage Bill Score at Capitol; 'Tropic Holiday,' at the Earle, Is Lively Musical Screen Play, Vaudeville Both Thickly Peopled With Stars.

"ALWAYS GOODBYE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Gilbert Emery and Douglas Doty, adapted to the screen by Kathryn Scola and Edith Skouras, co-starring Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall, with Ian Hunter, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero, Lynn Bari, Mary Forbes, Albert Conti, Marcelle Corday, Franklyn Pangborn and Master Johnny Russell. Directed by Sidney Lanfield. Previewed Tuesday, July 12. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

There is something of the flavor, but little of the anguish, of "Stella Dallas" in this costellar vehicle for the talents of Barbara Stanwick and Herbert Marshall. Miss Stanwyck again is cast as a young mother who is forced to undergo the sacrifice of personal happiness to insure the welfare of her small son, but the surrender of her own inclinations is accomplished under happier circumstances than in the earlier subject.

BELL.

Miss Stanwyck, in the opening sequence of "Always Goodbye," is awaiting her bridegroom in front of the City Hall, where they are to be married. He is killed in an automobile accident before her eyes, and the only recourse for her seems the river. She is deterred from her destructive motive by a seeming derelict, loafing on the dimly lighted dock. This apparently indigent, but helpful, young man proves to be an eminent medical scientist, down on his luck, and it is made clear, a little later, that Miss Stanwyck's desperation is the outgrowth of a circumstance that seems to have evaded the watchful eye of the Will Hays' office.

At any rate, Margot Weston—the character assumed by Miss Stanwyck—finds a new interest in life through the intercession of Jim Howard, and her son is born to be adopted into the home of two of his closest and richest friends. The mother relinquishes her child under the pledge never to attempt to see or speak to him again. But her estate in life undergoes a sudden change. She develops a superior ability as a stylist and costume designer, under the watchful tutelage of one Harriet Martin, proprietress of a smart gown shop in New York. On a buying trip to Paris, Margot, by accident, encounters her 5-year-old son in a hotel elevator, and from that point on is never out of touch with him, although her own identity remains unknown to Phillip Marshall and his sister, who have taken her place in the affections of her son.

Is Trimmed With Humor.

By what romantic and reasonably plausible means Margot comes again into possession of the thing she holds most dear in life—at the sacrifice of her love for Jim—forms a movement of the story that is as interesting as it is sprightly with a quality of humor that was almost completely lacking from the structure of "Stella Dallas."

Always Goodbye," it should be emphasized, is in no sense a somber or lugubrious picture. It moves in the rarified atmosphere of great wealth, luxurious living and smart repartee. The undertone of disappointment and regret, of course, is continuously, but by no means obtrusively, present. It is, as a matter of fact, effectively subordinated to the play's gayer and more enlivening moods. These are many. With Binnie Barnes playing the role of Harriet Martin, Ian Hunter that of the lad's foster father and Cesar Romero a volatile and polished Parisian, with an irresistible weakness for beautiful women—all beautiful women—"Always Goodbye" is a literate, adult and frequently amusing film play that quite justifies the assignment of so many excellent performers to its major roles.

Miss Stanwyck here has the opportunity to demonstrate that she is a lovely young woman, strikingly handsome in a series of swagger costumes, as well as a competent actress. It would be nice if she would learn to say "him," instead of her habitual "'im," but otherwise her portrayal of her role is approximately beyond reproach. Herbert Marshall is, as usual, a fine foil for his costar's greater ebullience and Ian Hunter and Cesar Romero make their characters wholly delightful. All of these profit by the extraordinary capabilities revealed by Master Johnny Russell, cast in the role of the growing son. Master Johnny is one of the most proficient of the child actors and lends the picture a great degree of charm.

Johnny Perkins, Et Al.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week quite keeps step with the screen feature. Johnny Perkins, returning for his annual visit, masters the ceremonies and keeps things moving at a pleasant clip with his steady barrage of anecdotes, wisecracks and genial ad libbing. Some of the jokes need a little refrigeration, but Perkins has a way with him that makes even the old ones sound new—or at least funny.

Among the outstanding specialists he introduces are Ruth Petty and the Titan Trio. Miss Petty is a blonde singing comedienne, with a lusty voice and a variety of tricky gestures, who can be relied upon to cash in any song for all it is worth. She and the Perkins, in combination, virtually stopped the second show yesterday afternoon. The Titans are three gymnasts and hand-balancers who perform feats of leverage and strength that have never been seen before. I wouldn't be at all surprised if most of them are impossible of accomplishment.

Bob King is a ventriloquist who goes Edgar Bergen one better in the number of his dummies and suffers slightly from too laggard timing and material that is not quite so lively as it ought to be. The stage bill has as its intermittent background the 12 Dancing Delovelies with the accomplished Janette Hackett as premier danseuse. Their routines are novel and colorfully effective. Master Perkins gave them a little added rest yesterday by wheedling Phil Lampkin into tooting a couple of unprogrammed trumpet solos—a reprise of Ruth Petty's last encore number, "Some of These Days" and "When Day Is Done."

"WHEN WERE YOU BORN?" Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Manley P. Hall, adapted to the screen by Anthony Coldeway, featuring Margaret Lindsay, Anna May Wong, Lola Lane and Anthony Averill, with Charles Wilson, Frank Jaquet, Eric Stanley, James Stephenson, Jeffrey Lynn, Leonard Mudie and Jack Moore. Directed by William McGann. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

Maybe there is something to astrology after all. Anyhow, here we are on our birthday reviewing "When Were You Born?" and we swear the boss didn't know it when he handed out the assignment.

It's a strange concoction, this (in the langauge of the trade) exploitation picture; more an illustrated lecture than a movie yet the lecture portions are more interesting than the moving episodes. Based on the undeniable truth that we all like very much to talk about ourselves and like even more to hear others talk about us, the picture, in its course, gives out information on the characteristics of persons born under all signs of the Zodiac. Yes, you're sure to hear at least a few things about yourself, sandwiched in between the many things told about the three murdered men and the murderers in the plot.

Miss Mary Lee Ling, Chinese astrologer, predicts the death of one Philip Corey within 48 hours and, lo and behold, he is murdered quite properly on schedule. Then Miss Ling sets out to help the police department—somewhat against the department's will—solve the mystery. How? By asking each suspect when he was born, figuring out his character and the astrological influences at the hour of the crime. You know—how was your Saturn and Neptune, Moon and Sun at the moment Corey was shot? Certainly a new way to solve a "Whodunit."

Mr. Hall, author of the story and billed as a well-known astrologer, introduces his picture, and it is supposed to be very O. K., but we bet the Zodiac is as surprised as we are to find that all people born under the same sign look so much alike! Miss Ling can tell their birth month, just by glancing at them! But, honestly, we know a boy who celebrates a birthday tomorrow, and a girl born yesterday, and truly we're not twin-ish.

Anna May Wong has a tremendous burden of lines as Miss Ling, asking, "When were you born?" at least 20 times, but she manages to be attractive and interesting throughout. Lola Lane appears briefly and then vanishes. Maybe the stars just ruled her out after reel one, kinda silly from a plot angle, but the stars say so—out you go. Of the people named in the fine print above, Margaret Lindsay, Anthony Averill (he of the terrible diction), Charles Wilson, James Stephenson, Eric Stanley and Leonard Mudie are most important, though none of them really matters. It is Taurus, Leo, Gemini, Cancer, Scorpio, Capricorn and the six other Zodiac signs that count. The plot is feeble and hardly holds together, but the astrology, fact or fiction, is interesting to the curious. And aren't we all?

Subsidiaries include a stupid and long paraphrase of "Prisoner of Zenda," entitled "Prisoner of Swing" and enlisting Hal LeRoy's services; as Edgar Kennedy comedy, and the newsreel including the special rush clip of the epoch-making Howard Hughes return.

"TROPIC HOLIDAY." Paramount picturization of a story by Don Hartman and Frank Butler, adapted to the screen by the Messrs. Hartman and Butler John C. Moffit and Duke Atterberry, featuring Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland and Tito Guizar, with Binnie Barnes, Michael Visaroff, Elvira Rios, Roberto Soto, Matt McHugh, Bobby Moya, Pepito Perez, Fortuno Bona-Nova, the San Cristobal Marimba Band and the Ascensio del Rio Trio. Directed by Theodore Reed. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earl Theater.

In "Tropic Holiday," Paramount has accomplished that unaccustomed feat in Hollywood of producing a musical comedy that is rich in both music and comedy.

The basic story upon which the plot is founded is substantial enough to satisfy the classes and not sufficiently profound to bore the masses. The instrumental and vocal interruptions are colorful and tuneful and introduce to American audiences a few Mexican artists whose endowments are generous.

The whole thing is motivated by the presence in Mexico of one Ken Warren, Hollywood scenario writer, who has escaped from the film capital to seek inspiration for a real screen love story across the border. If it hadn't been for Manuela and her limpid eyes and ditto voice, he probably would have got along all right with his playwriting. Or, even with her hovering tantalizingly around, he might have done fairly well if Breck Jones, the Indians' candidate for Oklahoma Senator, hadn't dropped into town in search of Midge Miller, a boyhood sweetheart—or if Marilyn Joyce had remained in her studio, starring in pictures, instead of winging down to see what had happened to Ken.

But all of these distracting things happened. And, besides all that, there were a surprising number of guitars, marimbas and lilting voices in the little town to take anybody's mind off his work—not to mention the craziest bullfight ever caught by the cameras, not even excepting Eddie Cantor's or the Ritz Brothers'. You can see for yourself how things went.

Cast Well Chosen.

All this conglomeration of mixed motives, cross-purposes, futile romances, farcical antics and moonlit love is intrusted to players who know precisely what to do with it. Bob Burns, as the aspirant to the Senate, seems to have succeeded the late Will Rogers as the only comedian who can poke fun at the institutions of American government inoffensively. Martha Raye, as Midge, the object of his affection, gives a completely convincing demonstration of what a lady matador should not do in the ring with Furioso, the most savage of the bulls, when she thinks it is Pacifico, the tamest. Ray Milland and Dorothy Lamour—cast together in many earlier releases—are the young lovers, and Binnie Barnes the movie star who is tricked out of Ken Warren, but gets Tito Guizar in his place, which may or may not have left her score all even.

Tito Guizar, naturally, sings hauntingly in his fine tenor voice and so does Miss Lamour in her mezzo. They are matched in musical proficiency by Elvira Rios, an excellent soprano, and the Ascensio del Rio Trio, who appear all too briefly in the guise of Mexican "harmony singers"—which they are—after the manner of the Boswell Sisters, the Three X Sisters and similar American threesomes. And that San Cristobal Marimba Band peps the whole merry business up no end.

Several of the scenes are of spectacular proportions and all are embellished with the picturesque costumes and accessories of the country in which the scene is laid. If one were compelled to put the finger on the keynote of the entire goings on, comedy would probably receive the nomination.

The outstanding hit of the stage revue at the Earle this week is supplied by the Borrah Minevitch Harmonica Rascals—without Mr. Minevitch. The maestro of this unique organization, strangely enough, is not missed. Their work still partakes of a genuine quality of musicianship and is marked by a steady flow of the best timed comedy to be seen on any man's stage—thanks to the diminutive little fellow who is always getting himself in a jam.

Blake's Imitations Unique.

Next in point of popularity comes Larry Blake, a character impersonator of the raconteur type who offers lifelike vocal mimicry of Lionel Barrymore, Edward G. Robinson, Greta Garbo, Gregory Ratoff, John Barrymore and scores more of the film great, without ever letting you know he is doing it—if you get the idea. Mr. Blake is the one artist of whom I am aware who has the courage to undertake his carbon copies without preliminary announcement of the subject.

And on the dancing side there is Marion Daniels. Miss Daniels is a graceful and supple blonde with a fine sense of rhythm, who executes her acrobatic dances with a nimble ease that quite belies their intricate complexities. The 16 Dancing Co-eds furnish ensemble examples of the dance, now and again, and a touch of novelty is given the bill by Maysy and Brach, marvels on both the low and the high unicycles. Like the Titans, at the Capitol, they do practically impossible tricks of balancing and co-ordination.

Then in the background is Ray Baine, making his professional debut as a vocal soloist and doing especially well at it, too. Mr. Baine, is a local product, residing at 1702 Summit place.

The bill is further augmented by the Paramount News, featuring the American Nazi trials and Howard Hughes' landing in New York; the Mauch Twins in a Technicolor subject, "Sons of the Plains," that goes back almost to the old Essanay and Kalem days, and Jo Lombardi's orchestral interludes. Nice bill.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 15.—"Don't take chances," says Charles Bickford to all our stars who insist on doing dangerous scenes, when studios supply "stunt men," trained to take the rap.

HEDDA HOPPER

Two and a half years ago when Bickford was playing in "East of Java," a lion buried his molars in Bickford's sterno mastoid muscle which paralyzed one side of his face and most of his hair fell out.

Since then he's taken daily treatment and at last restored the nerve centers and muscles and has a new crop of hair. He's just finished "Valley of the Giants." He still owns and runs a garage and parking lot opposite M.-G.-M., as a sideline. Always a pleasure to park and pay there because his boys are so nice.

Bet when Sally Rand sees it, she'll be sorry she refused to do the can-can in "Zaza." She said it was too sexy. "My fan and bubble dances are art, spelt with a capital A." Claudette Colbert is going to do her own can-can.

While the war still rages in China 365 Chinese have been rounded up in Hollywood and given work with Warner Baxter and Alice Faye in "By the Dawns Early Light." Half of the money they receive will be sent to help the helpless in their own country.

Dottie Lamour is busy these days decorating her new home in Coldwater Canyon. She will warm it by giving a reception for her secretary of less than a year, Miss Charlo Holden, who becomes Mrs. Knowles Smith. They'll live in Cadillac, Mich.

Eddie Robinson turned matchmaker when he introduced Claire Trevor to Clark Andrews on his first radio program. They'll be married July 27, with all the trimmings—church, six bridesmaids, rice and old shoes.

They're certainly having a big wind on the golf course near Fox where they've built a movie version of the Suez Canal. All the wind equipment in town is being used and all precautions are being taken. In spite of everything, sand got into Tyrone Power's eyes and nearly blinded him. They were so bloodshot at the opening of "Marie Antoinette" that he was in agony.

Bob Burns and the "Arkansas Traveler" company waited in the Malibu Mountains while property men went out and foraged for fresh lettuce, needed for a scene. Deer had come during the night and made away with their supply.

Czechoslovakia puts an end to speeding. Good, too. They stop you—say "sorry," then let the air out of your tires, apologize again, and go about their business. After you've pumped up four tires, you're apt to be more careful!

Horroman, Boris Karloff, turned surgeon in "Devil's Island" and performed an operation on 7-year-old Rollo Gourvich, which lasted three days. Doctors attended, seeing that it was done properly. Lucky they were there. A visitor fainted and had to be given first aid.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Having Once Taken Advantage of Girl, Man Threatens Exposure Unless She Continues Seeing Him.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 19, working for one of the Government departments. I am of a good family, have three brothers, one small sister and both parents living. We are native Washingtonians. About eight months ago, I met at a party, through a friend, a young man from New York, about 27 years old, also employed by the Government. I don't go out much, although I am considered attractive, and when I do have dates, my mother insists that she meet the young man first.

* * * *

This New Yorker asked to take me out, and later telephoned me several times at home. I finally invited him to the house for dinner and he met the family. Mother thought his manners not very good, and his attitude somewhat arrogant, but she had no objection to my going to a show with him, if I desired. So I did go out with him—to several shows, dances and so on.

* * * *

He never made an ungentlemanly move until about a month ago. Coming home from a night club in Virginia—where we had danced and had a few cocktails, he drove into a side road, some miles out of Alexandria, that apparently he had picked out beforehand, because he drove into it for perhaps 200 yards without hesitation. There was not a house near. There he switched off the motor, pulled out a flask and offered me a drink. I refused and asked him to take me home at once, explaining that my mother objected to my coming home late.

* * * *

He laughed, said, "You're in for a new experience tonight, Babe," and took a drink himself. Then he pulled me to him and started mauling me. I managed to get the door open and jumped out. But he was right behind me. He grabbed and tripped me. I fought as best I could, but he was too strong . . . The beast raped me before finally picking me up, placing me in the car and taking me home. My people were sleeping when I got home and, bruised and torn though I was, I managed to get myself into bed. In the morning I told my mother I didn't feel well and didn't go to work. It was three days before I felt equal to getting up. Mother wanted to call a doctor and I had a hard time dissuading her. I knew if she did, he would soon know the truth.

* * * *

I know what you may say—that I should have told my parents the moment I got home—and then the police. But you don't know my father and brothers. They wouldn't have gone to the police. They would have sought out my attacker and killed him on the spot. God knows I wanted to tell. Time and again I have barely held it in, and it was not concern for the man that stopped me, but fear of the consequences to my father and brothers when they had done with him. And even if they didn't kill him—even if the police got him—there would have been the trial, the pitiless publicity, pointed fingers and knowing smirks. People are so willing, it seems, to believe the worst of a girl in such cases; to believe she had "led the man on" or had had previous experiences. So I said nothing.

* * * *

Then, about a week ago, this man had the effrontery to call me again and ask for a date. I was so choked with rage and horror that I couldn't even speak; just hung up. But he has since called repeatedly, and the last time I answered he told me that if I refused again to go out with him he was going to let it be known among my friends that I had been intimate with him; that I had yielded. He said that no one would believe I had been forced, as I had not complained to anyone.

* * * *

What shall I do, Miss Haworth? I would not go with him if he published his lies in the newspapers. But what shall I do in my own defense? May I complain to the police at this late date? Shall I tell my mother? I suppose I have been foolish all the way through, but, believe me, I was innocent in every sense of the word until this happened. I didn't know such beasts existed in human form. He is a menace to every decent girl he meets. I had never done anything to make him think I might be "easy," outside of taking a couple of drinks once or twice, and letting him kiss me twice. We had never "petted." Until a few days ago I was in mortal dread of pregnancy. If that had happened I would have killed myself. It would have been too much. WORRIED.

See District Attorney.

DEAR WORRIED: You can secure protection from, and redress against, this man by appealing to District Attorney David A. Pine, of the District of Columbia, who has offices in the Court House at Fifth and E streets northwest. This man renders himself liable to prosecution under the blackmail statute of the District of Columbia, through attempting to coerce you with threats of disgrace. This statute provides that "whoever verbally or in writing accuses or threatens to accuse any person of a crime or of conduct which, if true, would tend to disgrace such other person, or in any way subject him to the ridicule or contempt of society, or threatens to expose or publish any of his infirmities or failings, with intent to extort from such other person anything of value or any pecuniary advantage whatever, or to compel the person accused or threatened to do or to refrain from doing any act, and whoever with such intent publishes any such accusation against any other person shall be imprisoned for not more than five years or be fined not more than $1,000, or both."

* * * *

If this is a bona fide case, and you were as brutally and infamously abused as you allege, you would be rendering a real public service in having your attacker brought to justice. He is a person who is unfit to be at large in society—a menace, as you say, to every girl he meets. He may be incipiently maniacal; he may be diseased. And because of this latter possibility, it is to your personal interest to take your problem not alone to the District Attorney, but to a gynecologist as well, and have a thorough examination made. By seeing a physician, you will be safeguarding your health on two fronts—on both the psychic and physical fronts. This is not a secret to look in your own breast. The emotional defilement of such an experience demands cleansing of a confessional sort, just as the physical defilement demands treatment of an antiseptic sort.

* * * *

You have been foolish in letting matters drift this long, but I am not prepared to say that you have been unwise, all things considered, in refraining from confessing the episode to your family. After talking with the District Attorney and with a gynecologist, be guided by their advice concerning whether or not your family should be informed of what took place.

* * * *

Incidentally, I am told (by the best legal authority) that, in view of the broad language of the statute quoted above, it would be best not to threaten the man with prosecution unless he stops telephoning you, as such a counter-thrust could be construed as being akin to his own criminal attempts at coercion; but that you should, rather, just take steps to translate your intention along that line into action.

* * * *

If, in bringing the case to the attention of the District Atttorney, you ask that you be spared all possible notoriety and offensive publicity, I have no doubt that steps can be taken quietly, but nonetheless effectively, for putting a stop to the man's intrusion into your life. I am confident that once the man realizes that you mean business, as we say in the language of the day, you will no longer be molested by him.

Keep the Curls High for Summer

TWO THINGS should characterize the summer coiffure—it should be simple in arrangement and it should be off the neck. Fussy coiffures look as well as feel hot and are difficult to keep in place in summer breezes. And the "up and away" style of hairdress is not only cool but in line with all present coiffure trends. Latest predictions for fall are that coiffures will continue to sweep up—and up. So by wearing your hair that way now you are getting it into good form for whatever may come later. A popular and comfortable haircut for summer is the tapered line which leaves the hair about four to five inches long all over the head. With this cut curls and ringlets stay in better, as there is no weight to pull them down. For evening you can sweep the back hair as high as possible off the neck and look both cool and patrician. The coiffure shown is a good example of how curls may be banked high for both chic and comfort. The hair is fluffed away from the neck, temples and forehead and the curls turned under in the same direction.

Leather Hats Add Spice to Summer Fashion Recipes

New York (AP).—Leather hats have come to town as spice for the mid-summer fashion menu.

Lily Dache makes them of kid and suede in such colors as elephant grey, rural autumn (a rich maple leaf red), dawn blue (green blue) and beet root (a deep dark red) as well as the regulation shades trimmed with bright colors. She sends them out with gloves of the same color to wear now with dark midseason frocks and later with first fall suits.

Bright Hats.

As more midseason fashion seasoning, one of the country's leading hatters is launching wine, forest green and bright blue velvet hats inspired by those worn by the swashbuckling musketeers of the seventeenth century.

The three hundredth anniversary of the birth of King Louis XIV of France, which falls this year, has inspired more fashion pepper for both late summer and early fall wardrobes. Big jeweled pins about three inches in diameter, set with rhinestones and colored stones and designed to wear on necklaces and lapels, reflect the ornamentation of the Sun King's reign.

A New Touch.

Other new baubles which intrigue smart women are rigid gold bracelets about two inches wide.

Midseason fashion spice also includes a number of tricks for brightening and varying a dark frock that is beginning to wilt a bit in summer heat. Among them are dark crepe boleros embroidered in white daisies. Something new in neckwear is a frivolous frilly little jabot scarf of Valenciennes lace which may be tucked inside the neckline of a dark summer suit.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 15.

WE SHIP more folks abroad every summer than we get in return. This has always been true, and as economists would put it, our tourist-trade balance is very phooey. However, among our visitors this month has been an amazingly pretty newspaperwoman from London, and she rang me up to say "pip-pip," or something. And to this I don't quite know whether I've been kidded or not. The London gal's name is Eileen-Mary Ascroft, and I asked her to come over for a spot of oolong, which she did. She was not only sweet and good-looking, but she seemed extremely shy, and in no time I found myself interviewing her rather than vice and versa. I learned that her job is a daily column for the London Mirror. "What kind?" I asked. "Oh, I write about birds and butterflies and noble thoughts," replied Eileen-Mary. Well, I was taken aback. Do you wonder?

ALICE HUGHES.

"But you've been going to all our famous night clubs, like the Stork and El Morocco!" I said. "Tell me one noble thought you found in those joints! Are you going to write about them?" "Oh dear no," said the Londonette. "I'm not supposed to be here at all, officially." I gave up. We had our tea, a little more talk, and parted amiably. But I still don't get it, and have a sneaking hunch that the Ascroft girl was pulling my leg, or "giving me the needle," as you odd Americans say. But if she does write about the little birds, Eileen-Mary sure found plenty of odd ones in our silly gilded supper-spots. And also lots of butterflies who should be netted.

I certainly wonder what that visitor is up to, if anything. Probably nothing—or else she's a very fine actress indeed. Just the same, I'm going to keep an eye on the London Mirror to see what La Ascroft does write about us!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—My researches into the crazy world of divorce causes get hotter every day, like Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. Maybe you missed the one from Chicago, where Mrs. Dorothy Orth got a decree from John because he struck her. What with? The family collie, who weighed 18 pounds and was hurled from a distance of 6 feet. That, I dare swear, is a new high in tossing things in the happy home. Dorothy got the divorce. John got the dog. Next?

It seems as though we grow young opera singers here as easily as radishes in a Park avenue penthouse. Last night a pretty Brooklyn girl named Gloria Ware, only 18, made her soprano debut with the Philharmonic Symphony out under the stars at the Lewisohn Stadium—as Micaela in the dear old warhorse, "Carmen." How did she get her shot? Well, she is a pupil of Mme. Frances Alda, and a protegee of Mrs. James P. Donahue, who is a Woolworth heiress and sings for her own amusement. But it's fine for Gloria, under these auspices.

* * * *

Lady authors are doing right well, as usual. Marjorie Rawlings' "The Yearling" has sold 157,000 copies (as of today), and Mary Sullivan, boss of our town's stern and winning lady cops, has just published a book called "Double Life"—and then of course, there is Mrs. Rinehart. Her "The Wall" is out, and no doubt will move fast over the counters. Gosh, it's over 15 years since I had Christmas dinner with her and her family in the old Boise Penrose suite at the Wardman Park Hotel in Washington—and for the first time I tasted baked sweet potatoes, very gooey, with meringue on top. What I'd give for such an experience again! . . . .

* * * *

Just at the height of the visiting season, operators of our town's sightseeing bus lines have been smitten by a strike of chauffeurs and lecturers, and the bosses view death with no alarm. Their big mouth—no buses—no business. The tragedy of it all! What—no Chinatown?

* * * *

How our girls do design cutie tricks! Stella Schoen has just brought out a new lapel watch called "The Beehive," which it resembles, and Alice Luton has evolved a traveling cosmetics-case which carries six indispensable things a girl needs while on the go—whether to the nearest beach or the Gobi Desert. Our ladies always think up so many things. Hope there's cash enough for all!

Pique Parade.

Paris (AP).—Add to the pique parade: Chanel's vestee and three bows of white pique which form the sole decoration on a navy and white printed silk dress. Heim's white pique blouse and bolero worn atop a bright red box-pleated skirt of red wool. Mainbocher's summer tailleur made of red and white pique printed in a lace design. Worn with the latter is a red embroidered organdy blouse.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay,

Second Wind.

You wake up to find the morning air a stifling hangover from yesterday. How can you ever go through another day? You yawn and stretch your aching bones. You are simply too tired to get up. What you need is a rest—a long, long rest. You are really on the verge of a collapse.

If you could just get away somewhere for about a month. Just lie on the beach . . . and lie . . . and lie . . . not even think. Or sit on the veranda of some mountain lodge . . . just sit . . . and sit. For that matter, if you could just rest a week at home . . . or even a day . . . and not have to bother about the eternal three meals a day . . . and washing dishes . . . and making beds . . . Oh, well, there's nothing to do about it. You might as well get up.

You sit up weakly on the edge of the bed. You are simply not equal to getting dressed. There must be something the matter with you—some disease. Maybe your blood pressure is low. Maybe you've got anemia . . . or tuberculosis. Or maybe it's your heart. Really you can't go on this way. Any other woman would be in bed with a trained nurse waiting on her. You must see a doctor right away—maybe today . . . well, anyway tomorrow.

* * * *

You sink back on your pillow and think it over. For one thing, you've got to slow down. You have been driving yourself too hard. No wonder your face looks so drawn in the mirror and the powder won't go on. You have got to take things easier—"pamper yourself" more, as the advertisements urge.

All right, you will start in today! You will take everything slowly. Do what you can. Let the rest go. That's what other women do, and their husbands think more of them for it.

From now on you are not going to hurry about anything. Or do anything you don't have to. That mending can wait for one thing. And you are not going to put up those peach pickles. Another thing you are NOT going to make a cake for that picnic this evening with the Gadds. You'll just buy one at the bakery.

* * * *

Yes, the thing to do in this weather is to move just as slowly as you can. And sit down and relax a lot. And take a long nap after dinner. Act as they do in the tropics. Show some sense.

You arise and struggle weakly to the bathroom. You are so tired. You are just not the type that can stand humidity. You must call the doctor today and make an appointment for tomorrow.

After your shower you feel a little stronger. You dress leisurely. Let breakfast wait. The thought of it sickens you anyway. You go slowly downstairs. Why are your legs so wobbly? You ought to be in bed this minute. Well one thing sure, you will call up Blanche Gadd and tell her you are not able to go to the picnic.

After breakfast you decide to relax and read the morning paper before you wash the dishes. But your grandmother Plunkett rises up in you. "A pile of dirty dishes!" Oh well, you might as well get them out of the way before it gets any hotter.

Resolutely you sail into your task. You begin to feel stronger. Well, maybe while you are in the kitchen you might as well make those peach pickles . . . the peaches will spoil if you don't. Oh and you've got to call Blanche Gadd! Well . . . maybe you might as well go on with the picnic this time . . . since you've promised. You can buy a cake—no you might as well whip up a little lemon jelly one . . . it won't take any time and the home-made ones are so much better.

You look at the clock. Oh it's early yet! As soon as you get the peaches and the cake out of the way you'll straighten the house and do the mending. If you could just get everything about the house done today, you could get downtown tomorrow to the week-end sales—and maybe see the doctor on the way . . .

Still that would cut into your shopping . . . Oh well, you might as well wait now until next week to see the doctor. It might be a lot cooler then.

Be Simple and Individual, London Designer Advises

By Genevieve Reynolds.

IF YOU would be one of the best dressed women of the world—or even of your town—there are two basic rules to follow. Choose simple classic lines and add details for individuality.

That is the advice of Mme. Delia Gavana-Vineis, London court designer, who is visiting Mme. Maroussia Kirchivitsky, 2000 Connecticut avenue.

Duchess of Kent, England; Duchess of Windsor, America; Countess de Pohgnac, Paris; Von Iu Mnen, Vienna; Lynn Fontanne, American actress; Duchess of Cumberland, England.

First place is conceded the Duchess of Kent, with the Duchess of Windsor running a close second.

"Like Queen Elizabeth and the other members of English court society, the Duchess of Kent emphasizes dignity, simplicity and individuality in selecting her wardrobe," explained Mme. Delia, who lent her assistance in designing the coronation robes for Queen Elizabeth and many members of her court. "Conservatism and individuality are the keynote of Queen Elizabeth's taste. In fact, so much so that she is very fussy and exacting about all details."

"What qualifications do you attribute to the Duchess of Windsor's success in style leadership?" Mme. Delia was asked.

"Her innate good taste plus individuality," she replied, unhesitatingly. "She always chooses dresses that make her look taller and slimmer. The high off-the-face effect in hats is another trick that she uses to give an illusion of greater height. And like all other really chic women she demands simple but individual lines and accessories."

While French women have the greatest flair for style, it's much easier for the English and American women to be well-dressed because of their slender figures, Mme. Delia pointed out.

"But," she added, "the average woman seldom achieves the true smartness of the French and English woman for she lacks individuality. The American woman is too impatient to wait for a dress to be individualized by minute details. She is too accustomed to speed and mass production. Consequently, she wears a costume that often is duplicated by at least ten other women. I haven't seen one outstanding dress since I have been in Washington—but perhaps I came at the wrong season," she concluded.

Contrasting the English and American women in regard to style, Mme. Delia said the American woman could be quite well dressed on approximately $2,500 a year but the English woman required twice that amount. Also, she believes the American working woman dresses more smartly than the English working woman. She points out that only the professional woman in England could afford to spend $20 a month on clothes, but the average American working girl looks considerably better dressed on much less. "The English shop girls have little if any style," she said.

The present extreme feminine trend in fashions will continue at least five or six years, Mme. Delia predicts, and she doesn't believe women ever will return to the mannish styles of the post-war period. "Women have awakened to the fact that they went too far in trying to be hard and independent," she said. "They have learned now that it's smart to preserve and enhance their femininity."

Mme. Delia believes that the character of clothes influences personality and that with feminine styles women are bound to become more gentle and dignified in manner.

According to Mme. Delia's predictions, fall and winter fashions show no radical changes. In her own new creations she emphasizes the following: Fuzzy backs with small trains; bustle, feather or tucks on the skirt; closed bodices instead of low decolletage for evening; absence of puffed sleeves; lacquered appliqued flowers for evening dresses.

Tips For Conversation

Such moments are easy to hurdle. Sort the people you meet into types, know simple ways of breaking the ice, make a warm, friendly impression on each.

Bob's kind waits desperately for you to say something—anything. Pop out with what's on your mind—whether it's the draft blowing on the back of your neck or the movie you saw last night.

Bob finds his voice after his first "yes" and "no" replies—soon chats easily.

As for the confident, witty people—you can make a hit with them by being a good listener. "What an exciting story!" you say brightly. "A good point!"

Sometimes the man you yearn to know better is not shy but reserved. Give him the question treatment. "Do you meet lots of people on your job?" "Where are you vacationing?" "Oh, is fishing your hobby?" Soon you strike a spark, have him talking as if you were an old friend.

Knowing smooth phrases for different occasions is another help to your poise. At leave-takings say, "I've enjoyed it so much!" When congratulating friends, "I'm so glad of your good fortune."

Or do doubts about your English keep you mum? You make breaks like "party" for "person," "those kind" for "that kind"?

Parisians Prefer Black in Evening, Navy Blue for Day

Paris (AP).—Paris sees much navy worn for day, much black for night. The beautiful Countess de Plas wears a navy blue suit designed for her by Molyneux. This has an accordion pleated skirt, and a bodice of navy blue silk jersey. The jacket buttons all the way down, but the countess leaves the top open and fills it in with an Indian silk scarf striped in glowing shades of cyclamen pink and emerald. A crescent shaped diamond brooch holds the scarf in place.

Black for evening is thrice represented in a tulle model, ordered by the Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, Princess Pignatelli, and the Marquise de Montesquiou-Fezensac. This dress has a fitted bodice with dropped shoulders, and draped decollete held by a huge bunch of lilies-of-the-valley. The very wide skirt is tiered with pleated flounces graduating in width. This also is from Molyneux.

Lily Pons Says Her Garden Saves Her Voice by Cutting Tension.

By Ida Jean Kain.

"UMMMM . . . how does she do it," sighs the entranced listener as Lily Pons soars from one high note to another as easily as climbing stairsteps, and I think I have the answer. She does it with a garden.

Now, wait just a minute and let me explain! It is admitted from the beginning that Miss Pons is the world's most perfect coloratura: and no doubt this golden voice has been quite a help in her career. But nobody has ever had a career without some of the tension that goes with it, and tension has a way of putting sharp edges on high notes. What's more, nobody can sing like an angel (or Lily Pons) when she feels like shrieking. Miss Pons never feels like shrieking. That's where the garden is important.

"Tension hasn't a chance in a garden," Miss Pons observed, as we pursued the subject of relaxation "Whenever I begin to feel the pressure of work, I get out and dig . . ."

Gloves Have Claws.

"You mean you really dig?" I asked, stealing a glance at her incredibly long, beautifully shaped fingernails.

"Yes, I do," Miss Pons assured me, inspecting her nails on her own account. "I protect my hands with special gloves that have claws for digging, and if I do nick a nail once in awhile, it's worth it. For me, gardening is both relaxation and exercise."

Gardening is a means of relaxing and exercising.

Since this is her favorite activity, Miss Pons insists that it is mainly responsible for her trim figure. She has the tiniest waistline of all the prima donnas—a slight, 24-inch measurement that is several inches smaller than the average woman's, and is one of the few who did not have to undergo special regimes of diet and exercise prior to a screen debut.

Dieting Causes Tension.

In Miss Pons' opinion, drastic dieting is responsible for much of the tension among screen stars. "Some of the actresses go all day long with only a glass of milk and a salad," she exclaimed. "But the work is strenuous, too." For this reason, she prefers opera to the motion pictures.

Miss Pons has never been overweight, but she was underweight—"which is much worse," she is convinced. Instead of dieting to take her weight down for the films, she dieted to keep her weight up to normal. Finally, she has gained the 5 pounds that make her weight perfect and she is as proud as you would be.

Aside from Miss Pons' plan for relaxation, you will be interested in her as a person. With all this accent on glamour, it is refreshing to meet one of the most glamorous of all the stars of the entertainment world and find her a friendly, unaffected person, keenly interested in the everyday affairs of the average woman—especially gardening!

Argentine Midshipmen Feted at Tea Dance

Gay Party Held for Middies of Training Ship, El Presidente Sarmiento, in Visit Here; Silver Service Presented to Vessel.

The rather hectic visit to Washington by officers and midshipmen of the Argentine training ship, El Presidente Sarmiento, came to its social close yesterday afternoon with the tea dance given by the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil and the Naval Attache of the Embassy and Senora de Sueyro.

Not since late winter has Washington seen such a gay spectacle as was presented by yesterday's party. Rhumas and the latest swing numbers were played by an orchestra; champagne flowed freely; and the list of those present included practically everybody still left in Washington.

The party was held in the air-cooled ballroom of the Mayflower, as the Ambassador and Senora de Espil decided it would be more comfortable than at the embassy. Souvenirs of the occasion, in the form of green and white hat bands with the name of the ship for the ladies, and small medallions for the men, were presented to each guest on arrival.

Senor de Espil Makes Special Trip

All the way from her summer home at Narragansett, R. I., came Senora de Espil, and she returned there on the 8 o'clock train last evening. Yesterday she was her usual chic and charming self in a navy blue and white print, street length, with a diamond clip at the neckline. Also in the receiving line were the Commander of the training ship and the Naval Attache of the Embassy and Senora de Sueyro, the latter in a varicolored print.

Everybody was impressed at the perfect English spoken by the personnel of the ship, from the commander down to the youngest midshipman. It seems that courses in English are compulsory at the Argentine—equivalent of our Annapolis.

Yesterday's party for the midshipmen came as a climax to a day of Unknown Soldier, and the statue of Gen. Jose de San Martino, noted revolutionary leader. The visitors will leave this evening to rejoin their ship at Charleston, S. C., and will then prepare for a cruise to Europe. The training ship has visited Washington several times in the past, but next year will be made into a cruiser.

Navy, Diplomatic Corps Well Represented

Mrs. William D. Leahy, who accompanied her husband, the Chief of Naval Operations, chatted with Rear Admiral Ralston Holmes. Mrs. Leahy wore a salmon pink and black print, a black straw hat and a necklace of pearls. Rear Admiral and Mrs. Holmes expect to go to Tryon, N. C., where they have taken a cottage. Capt. and Mrs. Robert Munroe may go there also, if they can find a house, otherwise they will spend the summer in Washington, taking an occasional week-end now and then. Both Capt. and Mrs. Munroe were present yesterday.

The Danish Minister, Otto Wadsted, stood in earnest conversation with a friend, and nearby were the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro. Others from the Diplomatic Corps included the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera; the South African Minister, Ralph William Close, a summer bachelor, as Mrs. Close is in England; the Minister of Uruguay, J. Richling; the Guatemalan Envoy and Senora de Recinos, and Herbert Scholz, of the German Embsasy, who was accompanied by his house guest, Herr Dibirn, of Germany. They were classmates at college ten years ago, and hadn't seen each other since.

Argentines Presented With Silver Tea Service

The reception was brought to a close when the commander of the Brazilian training ship which visited Washington two weeks ago, presented the Argentine commander with a silver tea service on behalf of his ship. The presentation was accompanied by a speech in Spanish from both parties, which was followed by cheers from an audience which got the idea, if not the exact words.

The Brazilian commander, who returned to Washington especially for the presentation, was accompanied by the Charge d'Affaires of the Brazilian Embassy, Joaquim de Sousa Leao, and several other members of the staff.

Among the young ladies whom the midshipmen enjoyed meeting were Miss Dolly Corbin, who wore a white linen frock piped in black; Miss Carolyn Chantry, whose mother, Mrs. Alan Chantry, accompanied her; young Miss Barbara Beale, a subdebutante, and Miss Nancy Brereton, who wore a becoming print.

Others seen were Mrs. Wallach Merriam, chatting with Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel; Col. and Mrs. Holland Smith with their son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. Victor Smith, who are visiting before going to Lieut. Smith's new assignment at the Brooklyn Navy Yard; Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken, Mrs. R. B. Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, the latter wearing a smart brown linen frock and a brown straw hat with a huge white pique bow; Miss Francesca McKenney, who reports that her mother, Mrs. Charles McKenney, is visiting in Kennebunkport, Me.; Viscount J. H. de Sibour, and several hundred others.

Dinner Given For Dr. Garcia

The Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro were the ranking guests at a dinner given last evening by Dr. and Senora de Viteri at the Shoreham Terrace. The function was in honor of Dr. Arturo Garcia and Senora Garcia. He is the delegate from Ecuador. The Garcias will leave soon for Peru, where Dr. Garcia will serve as general secretary of the eighth Pan-American conference, to be held in Lima, in December.

Other guests at the dinner were Lawrence Duggan, chief of the Division of American Republics of the State Department, and Mrs. Duggan; Andrew Spruk, of the department, and Mrs. Spruk; the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza; Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, former president of Panama, and Senora de Alfaro; Dr. and Senora Alejandro de Ponce, Dr. and Senora Jose Vicente Trujillo, Dr. and Senora Enrique de Arroyo, the Charge d'Affaires of Brazil, Joaquim de Sousa Leao, and the Third Secretary of the Peruvian Embassy, Carlos Ortiz de Zevallos.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE PARTY which Count and Countess Roberti have been organizing for Capon Springs this week-end has grown from 2 to 15. Most of them will leave today by motor for the West Virginia resort, and return late tomorrow evening.

DUDLEY HARMON

Others going besides the Robertis include the Third Secretary of the British embassy and Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, who only returned a week or so ago from a motor trip to the West Coast; Ogden Hammond, brother of Countess Roberti; Miss Marion Trumbull, Miss Betty Hardie, and the Marquis Benedetto Capomazza of the Italian embassy.

• • • •

AS WE have written before, Capon Springs is a very folksy sort of place, and nobody bothers to dress up. The drive down is particularly beautiful after one has passed Winchester and travels through the Shenandoah Valley. On Saturday evenings all the guests gather to see square dances put on with much vigor by the country folk, who come from miles around.

Miss Rebecca Wellington, who was to have been a member of today's party, had to cancel her plans at the last moment. She hopes to get off the end of next week or shortly afterward for a trip of several weeks in the North, when she will visit various friends who have summer places in New England.

LADY LINDSAY, wife of the British Ambassador, is off today for a summer of peace and quiet on Long Island, where she has numerous friends and relatives . . . Miss Irene Boyle, who makes her home at the embassy, has recovered from an illness sufficiently to make plans for leaving shortly for New York City and Cooperstown, N. Y., to visit friends.

DEFINITELY the most important event of the next week in fashionable Southampton, Long Island, will be the wedding next Saturday of Miss Phyllis Thompson to Commander Jerauld Wright, U. S. N. Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis will entertain the bridal party at a large dinner at their magnificent home, Bayberry Land, on Friday evening before the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Davis offered their home to Mr. and Mrs. Thompson for the wedding breakfast, but Mr. and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, old friends of the Thompsons, had beaten them to it, and the function will be held at the Livingstons'.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis will leave early in August for Europe. They will go to England, France and the Tyrol, where they have joined up with Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin in renting a hunting lodge.

ATTENTION DEBUTANTES! A notice has appeared on our desk to the effect that this coming fall there will be published something called the Blue Book of Harvard, Yale and Princeton. Included in the list of several hundred men at present in the universities is a complete, concise history of each man, his college and home address, his lineage, and—this is the best part of all—his genealogy back no less than FOUR generations. So, if you're struggling with a list of dancing men for coming out parties next winter, here's the solution to your problem—and you may be sure that you're getting the VERY BEST.

Of course, in times past, the Harvard - Yale-and-Princeton youths have had all they could do to take in the debut parties in New York and Boston, to say nothing of proms at Smith, Bryn Mawr and Vassar, leaving little time to get all the way down to Washington.

Season Starts At Murray Bay

Murray Bay, the "Newport of Canada," has launched its summer colony season and among its hundreds of visitors from the United States are a number from Washington. Since 1892 the Taft family has opened a home at the popular resort, and this season, as is her custom, Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the former President and Chief Justice of the United States, is spending the season at her cottage with her three children and ten grandchildren.

Other regular colonists, Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Cabot and Miss Mabel T. Boardman also have arrived to open their summer homes. The Mount Murray Seigniory, home of Mr. and Mrs. Cabot, dates back to 1761 and was built by Lieut. Malcom Fraser, aide to Gen. Murray, one of the British officers who played an important role in the battles that ended the two-century rule of Canada by the French. Seigniorial tenure was abolished by the law in 1854 and the Cabot seigniory is a striking example of an ancient manor house of the old regime.

Miss Laura Harlan, Mrs. George Roe Lockwood, Mrs. H. B. Brisse and Mrs. H. R. Wyley are other Washington residents composing a party of the summer colony. Others at the resort this season include Mrs. J. A. Grenier, of Philadelphia; Charles J. Livingood, of Cincinnati; Mrs. J. H. Robb, of Beverly, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Ellery M. Sedgwick, of Dedham, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Semple, of Cincinnati.

Sra. Pastoriza Sails Thursday

Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Dominican Minister, and their children will leave oin Thursday to spend the remainder of the summer in the Dominican Republic.

Senora de Pastoriza will entertain at luncheon today in honor of Senora de Garcia Godoy, whose husband has been transferred from Counselor of the Dominican Legation here to Haiti, where he will serve as Minister.

Scout Camp Plans First Guest Day

Parents and Kinfolk May Visit May Flather Unit Tomorrow Afternoon.

The Post Club Editor.

Tomorrow will be the first visiting day of the season at Camp May Flather of the Girl Scouts—a time when the mothers and fathers, the uncles and the cousins and the aunts of the young campers can spend an afternoon with them and see all the points of interest at the camp.

Every other Sunday during the season is visitors' day. Guests are not expected at any other time, as callers necessarily upset the routine of camp life. The day set aside for visitors is, however, devoted exclusively to their entertainment. They are welcomed from 1 o'clock to 5, are taken on a tour of inspection, have opportunity to meet the director, Miss Florence Jennings, and individual counselors and then are taken to the pool, where one group or another of campers may be found swimming throughout the day. Usually there is also a special program presented showing what the girls have done in dramatics, handicraft and other camp activities.

There are no meals served to the visitors and the camp staff requests that they bring no food or candy to the girls. The camp meals are wholesome and adequate and are supplemented by special treats from time to time, so that additional sweets would be unwise, according to Miss Dorothy Davidson, director at the local Girl Scout headquarters.

"We even ask that visitors bring no gum," she said. "That is one of the things the Girl Scouts do without during their two weeks at camp."

At 5 o'clock the gates are closed, ending the visiting day, and the girls return to their camp routine. They have a "nosebag" supper, which has been prepared earlier in the day, and they choose different places to eat it, going in small groups to Lookout Mountain, to sit on rocks in the stream or to follow a favorite trail. They return in time for the campfire program at 7:30.

A new group is preparing to go into camp on Wednesday, following those who are returning Tuesday afternoon.

Girl Scout summer activities continue in the city as well as at May Flather. Last night, Mrs. Rebecca Spitler, skipper of the Girl Scout Mariners, met with the members of the troop who made a cruise on the Chesapeake a week ago. Council members were invited to attend the meeting at Scout headquarters at which the log was read and events of the cruise discussed.

The Day Camps are completing their third week with an attendance at some of them double what it has been in former years. Mrs. William Kiplinger is chairman of the women's committee and Miss Catherine Carter, director of the day camp program.

One of the interesting features for the day campers this year is the overnight hikes to Rockwood Manor, the estate now in the hands of the National Girl Scouts. At least one group each week goes to Rockwood for an overnight trip.

The day camps, which will continue until August 19, also include one for Brownie Scouts this season for the first time. It is proving popular and 70 to 80 girls between the ages of 7 and 10 years are attending. Mrs. Chester Miller is in charge of the Brownie camp, which is at Fort Kemble Park, Wesley Heights. The Brownies are from all parts of the city.

The new group of campers which will go to May Flather on Wednesday includes Eloise Albin, Martha Alexander, Jasmine Armstrong, Helen Josephine Ballinger, Winifred Barr, Anne Beam, Kathryn Beaudet, Anne Bennet, Mildred Betts, Alma Blackburn, Donna Bodholdt, Margaret Boudren, Janet Bovard, Naomi Brooks, Barbara and Peggy Jo Brown, Alice Coffman, Kay Cox, Carter Dawson, Mary Anne Dimel, Betty Packard Dyson, Helen R. Dwyer, Betty Evans, Janet Ellis, Ida May Ewing, Mary Alice Fairbank, Betty Jean Field, Frances Ellen Foley, Edith Foster, Julia I. Gamble, Mary Anne Graham, Elaine Gwynn, Jane J. Hall, Eleanor Hannen, Nancy Jane Harvey, Betty Helfrich, Elizabeth Hollingshead, Virginia Davis Hood, Jeanne Kaplan, Betty Jo Kurz.

This week-end the educational and industrial departments of the Y. W. C. A. will sponsor a trip to Natural Bridge, Va. The bus will leave the Y. W. C. A. headquarters, at Seventeenth and K streets northwest at 8:30 a. m. and will take the route over the Skyline Drive. The group will enjoy a box lunch on the way and in the evening will have dinner at the Natural Bridge Hotel. After dinner, members of the party will see the Pageant of Creation held in the great causeway.

Girl Scout Mariners Review Their Recent Cruise

Madame Chairman

MRS. ALLEN MOORE, newly appointed chairman of the department of government and education of the League of Women Voters, like other department heads of the league, has a background which fits her for leadership in that field.

She is now at Mount Vernon Seminary, where she gives individual instruction to students according to their special needs. In addition, she finds time to care for her own two children, is active in club work and is national president of Sigma of Sigma Chi, an organization composed of the wives of Sigma Chi Fraternity men. She also is a member of the American Association of University Women, the Colorado State Society and the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Before coming to Washington, she taught Latin at Randall School in Denver, where she was assistant headmistress.

Mrs. Moore plans during the coming year to continue study of the local school system, and to develop concrete results from the surveys which have been made under the league's department of education. The greatest need of the public schools is local autonomy in fiscal and administrative affairs, these surveys indicate.

A study will be made of the system of Federal aid to education and recommendations presented for its application to the District. A speakers' bureau also will be established to acquaint the public with local conditions.

She expects to attend the Breadloaf Writers' Conference there August 17.

Miss Olive Dean, former president of the education council of the Y. W. C. A., is in Vermont for the summer and also plans to be present for the Breadloaf conference.

THREE MEMBERS of Lincoln Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R., have been honored with the title of national corresponding secretaries. They are Mrs. Alice C. Howard, Miss Vera Redfern and Miss Nellie C. Those similarly honored in other circles of the Department of the Potomac were: Mrs. Mary Fortier, Mrs. Sara E. Fritchard, Mrs. Blanche Covert, Miss Anna Hausmann, Mrs. Katherine Hood and Mrs. Lucille Tamm.

The national encampment of the organization will be held in Des Moines, Iowa, in September. Mrs. Susanna V. Myers, is president of the Department of the Potomac and Mrs. Sarah Deeds, president of Lincoln Circle.

Understanding.

Understanding is an aid,
Helping those who are afraid.
—Old Mother Nature.

"I was afraid something would happen to him," said Reddy

The Careless One, young son of Reddy Fox, was a helpless prisoner. One hind leg was tightly held by two roots between which it had slipped down when he had jumped without seeing just where he would land. The leg had swelled and, of course, this made matters worse. It didn't pain him so much now, especially if he kept quiet. You see, that leg had grown more or less numb.

But if the young fox suffered less pain he suffered more from fright. What was to become of him? When his father appeared on the scene the Careless One had felt sure that his troubles were at an end. Father would set him free. But Reddy Fox was as helpless in the matter as the young fox himself, and when the latter realized this his despair was complete. If father couldn't help him no one could. He was sure of that.

Reddy found Mrs. Reddy and together they returned to the Careless One. Of course, Mrs. Reddy could do no more than Reddy could. She licked his face and tried to comfort him, but that was all she could do.

"I was afraid something would happen to him," said Reddy, as they stood a little way from him. "I guess he was born careless."

Mrs. Reddy nodded. "I guess he was," said she. "You go catch a mouse or something for him. I'll stay with him until you get back."

So Reddy trotted off to hunt and Mrs. Reddy lay down beside the Careless One and gently licked his face. It helped a lot. With his mother beside him he forgot for the time being his dreadful fear. He even dozed. He was awakened by the movements of his mother as she got to her feet. Her sharp black ears were set forward as she stared in the direction of certain faint sounds of which he now became aware. And then suddenly there was a rush of feet and there before them was Flip the Terrier. For just a breath he stood stock still, staring. Then he began to bark. How he barked! When he is excited, Flip does himself proud barking, and he was excited now. Never had he been more excited. He danced from side to side. He made little rushes of a few steps forward only to stop and back hastily. All the time Mrs. Reddy faced him, keeping between him and the Careless One, showing a set of sharp white teeth, rolling back her lips in an ugly snarl, and showing not the slightest fear of him. So Flip was discreet. He was barking for reinforcements. Presently they arrived. Farmer Brown's boy and his cousins, Sue and Sammy.

"What are you barking at, Flip?" demanded his master. Then he saw Mrs. Reddy still holding her ground and stopped abruptly.

"What is it, Tommy?" called Sammy as he and Sue came hurrying up.

Then Sue saw Mrs. Reddy and she stopped abruptly. "Oh" she cried softly. "Oh, you lovely thing!"

Just then Tommy saw the young Fox lying on the ground behind his mother. Instantly he knew that something was wrong with it and that this accounted for Mrs. Reddy's holding her ground. With a sharp command he silenced Flip and then told Sammy to hold Flip. "Something is the matter with that young Fox," said he crisply. "That is his mother with him and she never would have remained this way if he was all right. You two stay where you are and I will see if I can find out what is wrong."

Slowly he moved forward, talking in a low soothing tone to Mrs. Reddy, who retreated as slowly as he advanced. Her face no longer wore the ugly look that had been there as she had faced Flip. She knew Farmer Brown's boy. He was a friend. She might not understand his words, but that didn't matter; she understood him and that was all that was necessary. He would help. She could trust him. So she moved only a little back and waited. And the young Fox somehow also understood that here was the help he needed.

Club Federation Told Flaws Ruin Economic Setup

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Grand Rapids, July 15.—Flaws in our present economic system are due not to he system, but to the use individuals make of the system, it was asserted by Prof. Harry Gideonese at the banquet of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs tonight. Prof. Gideonese, late of the University of Chicago, who will join the staff at Columbia University in the autumn, was introduced by Miss Earlene White, of Washington, federation president.

Speaking before representatives of 48 States, Prof. Gideonese stressed the interdependence of modern economic life and the extent to which monopolies affect each other.

"Nothing constitutes a more serious menace to a democratic free system," he pointed out, "than the progressive destruction of free procedures by organized pressure groups.

Perhaps the most serious thing about such groups is that they are so seldom recognized as such. Monopoly groups so thoroughly permeate the thinking that the words 'chisler' and 'scab' are accepted as a matter of course, even when we ourselves profess faith in the maintenance of a competitive society The sober fact is that a chiseler is simply a competitor who really competes and a scab is a plumber who doesn't charge more than a professor can afford to pay.

"Everywhere words like 'fair trade,' 'fair competition,' 'collective bargaining,' hide the reality of restriction of trade, restriction of opportunity and monopolistic restrictions of the consumer.

"No group has a greater interest in a thoughtful and systematic program for the maintenance and restoration of competitive conditions than the women of the Nation, for both as producers and consumers, they are the first-line victims of monopolistic tendencies; as consumers for reasons that hardly need further emphasis; as producers because masculine, traditional privilege can think of the high sounding, sophisticated and public spirited slogans with which to protect privilege based on sex, against effective competition of newly enfranchised economic and political groups."

Telegrams were received from two past presidents of the organization, Miss Charl Ormond Williams, of Washington, and Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, of Richmond, Va., conveyed congratulations on the organization's progress.

Dean Agnes Wells, of Wilmington, Ind., brought the request of undergraduate girls from the University of Indiana that the federation appoint a committee to consider the possibility of studying ways and means for the organization of an auxiliary of college girls who are the business and professional women of the future. Miss Earlene White, of Washington, national president, announced that a committee to study the project shortly will be named.

The board of directors voted to become a participating organization for the career tours which are planned for the New York World Fair in 1939 under the leadership of the American Woman's Association. It also accepted the invitation of Mrs. Genevieve Forsberg MacLiver, of San Francisco, to co-operate in the San Francisco World Fair in 1939. A resolution indorsing the scholarship memorial plan in honor of Amelia Earhart, who was a member of the federation, was adopted at the final session.

Sorority to Pick Officers Today

Alpha Zeta Beta Sorority this morning will elect new officers and tonight hold the formal banquet and initiation, closing its three-day national convention, at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The nominations were opened yesterday afternoon at the first business meeting of the conclave and brought out some unexpected changes in the slate. Mrs. Wilma Wright, of San Diego, who was originally indorsed for national secretary by her chapter, yesterday was placed in nomination for national vice president instead. This adds her name to that of Miss Dorothy Yonkers, of Camden, and others are expected to be nominated this morning for the same office.

The withdrawal of Miss Wright from the race for secretary leaves Miss Amy Starkweather, of Camden, N. J., the only candidate. Although other nominations may be made from the floor today, it is generally conceded the election will be hers.

Pre-election gossip leaves the contest for the presidency between Mrs. Leila Lea Crevolin, of El Monte, Calif., who is now vice president, and Mrs. Velma Monroe, of Denver. Odds are with the former.

Nominations yesterday added the name of Mrs. Marie Lynch, of Sacramento, junior past president, to that of Miss Sylvia Tompkins, of Newburgh, N. Y., to the slate for editor of the national publication, Opheleo.

Women of Moose Plan to Entertain Children at Camp

Board of Montgomery Hospital Maps Plans for Benefit Supper

The woman's board of Montgomery County Hospital is in the midst of plans for its annual supper for the benefit of the institution, which will be held Tuesday, July 26, on the grounds of Sherwood High School, at Silver Spring.

The affair is the largest and most elaborate held in the vicinity of the Capital during the summer season, and represents the major money-making project of the board for the year.

Last summer 1,463 persons were served and, after all bills were paid the proceeds of the benefit amounted to $2,765. This included not only the revenue from the supper itself but also from the sale of fancy work, flowers, cakes and candy and the dance which followed.

In addition to this annual summer project, the board, of which Mrs. Charles C. Tumbleson, of Silver Spring, is president, has a donation day early in December. This is the occasion for gifts of money, linens, and staple groceries for the institution. Last year it was held on December 4 and netted $527.50 in addition to donations of food, linens and other articles.

Board Gives Valuable Aid

These gifts enable the woman's board to pay the housekeepers at the hospital and supply it with linen, kitchen equipment and furnishings, and to maintain the grounds. The board, which includes 90 women representing organizations in Montgomery and Howard Counties, contributed $6,600 toward the nurses' home and provides for its maintenance. Its total gifts to the hospital during the past eight years have amounted to $21,048.

There is also a junior auxiliary which added $300 to the fund last year, proceeds of a benefit dance it sponsored, and the members made 16,180 surgical dressings.

The menu for the supper this year includes fried chicken or chicken salad; home-cured ham, for which the farmers in the county save their largest and best—cold beef, homemade biscuit, Marylnad beaten biscuit, tomato and potato salad, cole slaw, and always a generous supply of homemade pickles, jams and jellies on the tables.

The dinners are served beneath big tents and the arrangements are so well organized that things move like clockwork. Each member of the committee is responsible for a certain item on the menu, or for seating and serving the crowd. Patrons enter the tent at one side and leave at the other, so as to avoid confusion and to make places for newcomers. Serving continues from 5 to 8 o'clock.

Brownies Have Day Camp, Too

A new feature this year will be a program at 8 o'clock for which there will be a small admission charge. There will be pony rides, as usual, for the children, and a grab bag as well. For the grown-ups there will be bingo, fortune tellers and a dance later in the evening. Flowers, candy, cakes, ice cream and lemonade will be sold, as before, and there will also be a table of fancywork.

Preparations for the supper are made in the school building and, in case of rain, it will also be served inside.

Mrs. Tumbleson has serving with her as this year's officers of the board Mrs. Mahlon Kirk 4th, of Ashton, first vice president; Mrs. Upton D. Nourse, of Dawsonville, second vice president; Mrs. William John Thomas, treasurer; Mrs. Francis Miller, secretary, and Mrs. Milton Bancroft, corresponding secretary, all of Silver Spring. Miss Frances Leisher is hospital superintendent.

Mrs. S. A. Nichols is chairman of the Howard County Auxiliary.

Mrs. A. J. Boyd is general chairman of the supper and has on her committee subchairmen, many of whom have served season after season in charge of the same part of the preparations. They include: Dance, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Cissell; entertainment, Miss Jeanne Molyneaux; cake table, Mrs. Roland Childs; ice cream, Mrs. Robert Sardo; candy table, Mrs. Addison Foster; checking booth Mrs. Charlotte Farquhar; information, Mrs. Robert O. Coulter; flower booth, Mrs. Eric Englund, fancy table, Mrs. Frederick L. Thomas; grab bag and specialty table, Junior Auxiliary; lemonade, Mrs. Ridgely Chichester; coffee, Mrs. Rust Canby; fried chicken, Mrs. Leonard Burns and Mrs. M. O. Stabler; chicken salad, Mrs. P. G. Ligon; butter and cream, Mrs. Annie Harding; pickle and jelly, Mrs. Roaderick Adams; salads, Mrs. Thomas Hyde 4th, ice tea, Mrs. Isaac Smith; ham and beef, Mrs. Robert Miller supper tent, Miss Clair Hutton; supper rooms, Mrs. A. B. Beall, Miss Eleanor Smith and Mrs. Ridgley Chichester; table furnishings, Mrs. Frances Miller; dishwashing, Mrs. J. J. Hutton and Mrs. Newton Stabler; waiters, Mrs. T. Yellott Canby and table decorations, Mrs. Eric Englund.

The men's committee includes Mahlon Kirk 4th and Robert Chichester.

President Views Magnificent Spectacle

Steaming majestically through San Francisco Bay in the light of the setting sun, the U. S. S. Houston, bearing President Roosevelt, passes in a review of 66 ships of the U. S. fleet. In the background are the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge and the city of San Francisco. This picture was made from the U. S. S. Pennsylvania as the bluejackets lined up rigidly.

Howard Hughes Is Honored

This shot from Trinity Church shows Howard Hughes (arrow) as the triumphal parade moved slowly up lower Broadway. It was New York's biggest paper-throwing day in a decade. The 3,300 police on duty had their hands full to restrain the crowd.

The Zoo's Toughest Inmate

Gram for gram, this hermit crab is probably the toughest guest at the Zoo. He and about 20 more like him arrived recently. The crab lives in a shell, and when he outgrows his home, he seeks a larger one, which often leads to deadly battles with other crabs

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Presidential Special, Yosemite Park, Calif., July 15, 1938.

When F. D. R. campaigned in California in 1936, the Presidential eye undeniably fell on more blondes clad in slacks than any human eye had ever seen before . . . This time, two years later, times have changed, slacks have grown conservative, a new record will be set: He will doubtless see more amazons in shorts, along his parade routes, than have ever adorned a single landscape.

Senator McAdoo . . . ageless.

Yesterday, the naval guns went boom more than a thousand times for the Commander-in-Chief in San Francisco Bay . . . Bands played the Star-Spangled Banner a hundred times. Thousands of arms stiffened at the saluting angle anywhere from two to 50 times each.

• • • •

YOSEMITE—As the Presidential caravan of ten motor cars and buses wound around the steep curves of Yosemite, the rumor spread by one of the front-car wits that the plan was to feed McAdoo to one of the park bears. The 76-year-old junior Senator from California sat with the President in the front car with young Mrs. McAdoo between them. The scenery was magnificent. Some of the veteran Washingtonians agreed that it was even better than Rock Creek in the National Capital, but with no white ducks swimming around.

Even in the wilds of Yosemite great crowds, composed largely of girls in shorts and slacks, the new mountaineer costumes, lined the roads.

When the caravan stopped at 7,000 feet for lunch under the Sequoias, the elderly tourist was amazed.

"Here I am a Roosevelt refugee," he said, "lying low in the hills, and he catches up with me even here."

"—1,000 booms, 10,000 salutes."

In a burst of patriotism, Henry Kannee, of the White House secretarial, and Keith Morgan, of Warm Springs, stood in the quarter-deck gale singing the National Anthem . . . It was so chilly in the bay that the President donned a topcoat . . . In the middle of the fleet, a young officer saw your sea-going correspondent stifle a yawn on the airplane deck. "Just another assignment, eh?" he said sardonically . . . I assured him that I had been up all night at my 16-inch grammar destroyer.

• • • •

A peep at the Presidential suite on the cruiser unveils no Babylonian luxury . . . F. D. R. will work and eat and relax for three weeks in a medium-sized stateroom converted from an ice compartment. There's a desk at which he will digest several large bags of documents and reports, as he half-apologetically explained more than once on his way across the continent.

• • • •

Also there's a very small bedroom, with bath. The carpet is dark green, the walls light green enamel . . . The glittering 40-foot Presidential launch has been hauled aboard again, as it has for his cruises the last five years; but he has never used it. He prefers the 28-foot whaleboat, equipped for fishing . . . A tiny elevator has replaced the ladder near his quarters on the fo'csle deck forward.

• • • •

Four trim little fighting seaplanes are mounted on the Houston, poised for flight on their catapult tracks. On one of them taciturn, modest Postoffice Inspector H. G. Theurer will fly back and forth across hundreds of miles of the Pacific, as he has before, carrying the President's dispatch bags. Some day Theurer may write a book about his flights; it should be a thriller.

Some of the Presidential entourage who regarded with suspicion the bathroom on the special train, aft of the baggage car, have finally succumbed . . . Both faucets of the shower run hot water, because the sun warms the tanks in the train roof. But a tub bath is feasible in the base of the shower, like a bath in a wash tub out at the old homestead—provided a cake of ice is used to cool the water . . . Any Senator who had his picture taken in this low-waisted tub would be a cinch for re-election.

• • • •

Since the news that Elliott Roosevelt won a $1,000 bet on the Oklahoma election leaked out, several wits have vowed to write an article called "Elliott's Got It" . . .

• • • •

Visitors Break All Records at Smithsonian

The fiscal year which ended June 30 saw a new record established for Washington tourist traffic, if figures released yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution are any criterion.

Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian and head of the National Museum, revealed 2,412,195 persons visited the buildings during the year, breaking all previous marks.

Smithsonian Institution figures are generally accepted as a fair gauge of the number of visitors to the National Capital. In 1936-1937 Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis," the exhibition of gowns worn by President's wives and the other better known items in the collection were viewed by 2,291,685.

Although 11 years have passed since Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's solo flight to Paris, his plane continue to be the biggest single attraction, Dr. Wetmore said.

Asked if the museum was interested in adding Howard Hughes' round-the-word ship to the aviation collection, he answered in the negative.

"We already have Wiley Post's 'Winnie Mae,'" Dr. Wetmore declared.

In spite of the record-breaking attendance at the Smithsonian buildings last year, a still higher figure will be boasted by the institution's bigger-than-daddy unit—National Zoological Park. The totals have not yet been tabulated.

Cases Conflict On TVA Ouster, Says McIntire

Cites Supreme Court Rulings Upholding or Denying Morgan Firing.

Supreme Court decisions in analogous cases may be cited either to support or to deny the validity of President Roosevelt's removal of TVA Chairman Morgan, Prof. John A. McIntire, of the George Washington University law faculty, said yesterday in a lecture preliminary to the opening, Monday, of a symposium on municipal corporations under the auspices of the law school.

Prof. McIntire pointed out that in the Myers case the Supreme Court upheld President Harding in the removal of a fourth-class postmaster, while on the other hand the recent removal of President Roosevelt of Federal Trade Commissioner Humphries was declared by the Court to be unconstitutional.

Characterizing the judicial reasoning in the former case as "doctrinaire," however, Prof. McIntire implied a belief in the case of the removal of Chairman Morgan the Chief Executive had exceeded his powers.

"One would be exercising the prerogative of a prophet to predict what will be the outcome in the TVA case. It is perfectly possible that the Supreme Court may be influenced by extra-legal considerations. But whatever the decision, it should be a guide-post to the future of Government corporations in the conduct of intragovernmental affairs," he said.

The lecturer reviewed the history of Government corporations, Federal, State and municipal, and analyzed the principles underlying judicial decisions which have been handed down relating to their functioning. He pointed out use by Government of the corporate device is by no means new, but has been greatly expanded in recent years, especially in the Federal field.

The symposium, meeting daily from 5 to 7 p. m., will be addressed by a number of experts who serve as counsel to some of the leading Government corporations or who are engaged in practice in related fields.

Mechanic Seized As a Member of Auto-Theft Ring

Break-up of a Washington-Richmond auto ring responsible for almost nightly thefts from the Capital was predicted by Chief of Detectives Bernard W Thompson last night following the arrest of a 32-year-old mechanic in the Virginia capital.

Thompson said he expected the arrest of two or three ringleaders of the gang within the next few days.

Members of the Washington automobile squad have been investigating the ring's operations here for at least two months, Thompson revealed. Detective Sergt. Jake Wolfe, of the auto squad, has been in Richmond four days aiding police there in the inquiry.

Thompson said several automobiles belonging to Washington residents have been recovered in a Richmond garage. The gang, he said, put stolen cars on the market through used car dealers. Serial numbers were altered and motors and chassis interchanged to hinder police in tracing the machines, Thompson said.

Jaywalk Peril Is Stressed Here

Jaywalking was blamed as a major cause of accidents last night by speakers at the Accident Prevention Institute sponsored by the Washington Junior Board of Commerce.

Main cause of pedestrian traffic fatalities, it was said, is crossing between intersections. It was also pointed out that pedestrians should obey traffic signals, inasmuch as drivers expect right of way when lights are in their favor.

Meetings of the Accident Prevention Institute are held every Friday night at 8 p. m. They are open to the public. At the next meeting, July 22, the speaker will be Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the local branch of the American Automobile Association.

Traffic Toll Mounts to 44 As Girl Dies

Bureau Reveals 2,352 Licenses Revoked in Past Year.

Death of one person, injury to five others and holding of one person for grand jury action in connection with a death were developments in the traffic situation yesterday as it was reported that 2,352 drivers' licenses had been revoked or suspended last fiscal year.

Second offense of speeding was the chief cause for revocation or suspension, the Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits reported to the District Commissioners in its annual report for the year ended June 30. The board took up 583 permits for that cause.

First offense speeding was next chief cause, with 560; general record followed, with 287, and reckless driving had 208.

Act in 12,087 Cases.

Driving privileges of 421 nonresidents were revoked and 1004 permits were revoked or suspended for traffic records in other States. The board acted on a total of 12,087 cases, and took no action in 9,596 others.

The Board of Revocation and Review of Character Licenses for Public Vehicles reported it had approved 289 applications and rejected 617 in 1,050 hearings. Revocations numbered 7, suspensions 66 and restorations 71.

The District's 1938 traffic toll mounted to 44 with the death of Grace Gardner, colored, 9, of 238 K street southwest, who was injured Wednesday.

Woman Driver Held.

Miss Kilgour was ordered held in the death of Mrs. Bessie Goldman, 80, of 4120 Fourteenth street northwest, wife of Rabbi Morris Goldman, 62, who was brought to the morgue on a stretcher yesterday to testify. Mrs. Goldman died at Emergency Hospital June 29, after she was struck at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest as she waited with her husband to board a streetcar.

The jury was told the streetcar had stopped and Mrs. Goldman and her husband were only a few feet from the door when they were hit. Rabbi Goldman has been in Georgetown Hospital since the accident.

The death of Mrs. Fay Robertson Roeca, 54, Covington, Ky., who died of injuries sustained Tuesday night when struck by a car at 3100 block Wisconsin avenue northwest, was held to be accidental, and Coxe, said by police to be the driver of the car, was released.

Two Inquests to Be Set.

No inquest had been set last night in the death of the Gardner girl, or of Willis Biggs, colored, 29, killed Wednesday when his motorcycle crashed into a truck at Eighteenth street and Kalorama road northwest. Police said the driver of the truck which struck the child was Clarence Miles, colored, 27, 342 Twelfth street southeast. She was treated at Providence Hospital, later transferred to Gallinger Hospital, and then sent home in the care of her mother.

Most seriously injured in traffic yesterday was James F. Skidmore, 77, patent attorney, who lives at 1502 Park road northwest. He suffered a possible fracture of the skull when he was struck at Fourteenth and E streets northwest, police said, by a car driven by Lydia Hill, 38, 1309 King street, Alexandria. Skidmore was brought to Emergency Hospital.

Four persons escaped serious injury when their automobile collided at Sixth street and New York avenue northwest, with a taxicab operated by E. W. Morgan, 22, Benning. Occupants of the car, which skidded 75 feet into a bus after the collision, were treated at Freedmen's Hospital and released. They were Wilbur Washington, 19, of 628 K street southwest; Albert Driver, 30, of 490 Casey court southwest; Sam Dozier, 44, of 319 Fourth street southwest and Ralph Williams, 42, of 1328 Union street southwest, all colored.

Applications for jobs with the Public Works Administration have been pouring in at the rate of 1,000 a day, it was stated yesterday.

Especially since passage of the relief-recovery bill a month ago, PWA offices here have been deluged by persons seeking jobs in the expanding administrative force. About 1,800 appointments already have been made, mostly to field offices. Approximately 200 remaining vacancies will be filled in the next few weeks.

Increase in the administrative staff has been necessitated, it was said, by the enormous number of applications for PWA grants and loans coming from every part of the United States. Since May, 2,860 requests have been received from local governments, and they are now flooding PWA at the rate of well over 100 a day.

The PWA staff has been growing since April, when it numbered 4,064 employes, the low point in recent months. New employes include both technical and clerical workers, it was said. Many of the positions are merely temporary and will be dropped in a few months, a PWA spokesman declared.

National Guard Leaves for Camp

Approximately 250 officers and men of the 29th Division Special Troops, part of the District National Guard, will leave in motor trucks at 7 a. m. today for their annual two-week encampment near Front Royal, Va.

The troops and the 29th Division Signal Corps from Norfolk, Va., commanded by Capt. Louis E. Philhower, will join the general staff of the division commanded by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, of Baltimore.

Maj. William T. Roy, commanding officer of the unit, preceded the troops to camp to make advance arrangements. Col. John W. Oehman, commanding officer of the 121st Engineers, will be in camp as an engineer officer on Gen. Reckord's staff.

The rugged and spectacular beauty of Utah's Bryce and Zion National parks lived for an hour last night in a quiet glade of Rock Creek Park.

A crowd of more than 1,000 gathered in Pierce Mill Picnic Grove, as an orange moon rose into the cloud-flecked sky, to follow natural-color slides portraying the fantastic scenery of a distant plateau eroded and tinted by countless centuries of wind and rain.

There was an authentic flavor of the West in the commentary by Clifford C. Presnall, for five years naturalist at Bryce and Zion parks, who pointed to the picture of a vast natural arch and explained that the Washington Monument could be stood upright beneath the limestone span.

And a perceptible tingle ran through his audience, which was fighting nothing fiercer than gnats and mosquitoes, as Presnall gravely cautioned them against feeding the bears when visiting the Western parks.

"Let me warn you that bears are wild animals," he said. "Their actions are absolutely unpredictable."

With fabulous country flashing past in brilliant shades unknown to Washington, the crowd was inclined to agree with Presnall's comment, "You sometimes wonder if such scenery is really so." After the last picture he told them, "there's peace and tranquillity out there."

The weekly campfire program, sponsored by the National Capital Parks, concluded with three hymns by a 30-voice choir from the Washington Chapel of the Mormon Church. They sang "Let the Mountains Shout for Joy," "Oh Ye Mountains High" and "Come, Come, Ye Saints," composed nearly 100 years ago as the Mormon pioneers labored across the Great Plains to Utah.

2 Bus Drivers Convicted for Fare-Box Fraud

9 Others Acquitted Upon Order of Justice Jesse Adkins.

Two of 11 bus drivers, all of them formerly employed by the Capital Transit Co., were found guilty of conspiring to defraud the company by a jury in District Court late yesterday. They were James C. Jackson and Harry E. Gibbons, for whom the jury brought in a recommendation for leniency.

Those acquitted by order of Justice Jesse C. Adkins earlier in the day were Augustus Jenkins, Holmes A. Orndoff, Theodore Willoughby, Robert R. Rawls, Paul A. Bishop, Thomas F. Sliney, William C. Lunsford, Roy R. Swann and John F. Johnson. They were found to have no connection with the conspiracy as it was outlined in the indictment.

According to the Government charges, Jackson obtained a key that would unlock the cash boxes of the buses. He was accused of meeting buses in lonely spots, where their boxes would be opened and he would split the contents half and half with the driver. It was estimated $4,500 was taken in all.

A sharp drop in revenue brought about an investigation by the company, following which inspectors were sent out to find the leak. In a bill of particulars filed by the Government it was stated that Jackson "had made a key for the opening of fare boxes."

The Jackson key, it was said, would open the boxes without the aid of another key, while those used by the company required two keys.

At the request of Attorney Milton I. Lewis, Justice Adkins permitted both Jackson and Gibbons to remain on bond pending an appeal. Lewis represented all 11 defendants.

G.H.A. Is Sure It Will Gain 'Right to Live'

Association Announces $100,000 Campaign to Set Up Hospital.

Kirkpatrick Discloses Plan for Repayment of HOLC $40,000.

Exuding confidence that it will triumph in its "struggle for the right to live," Group Health Association, Inc., yesterday announced a $100,000 campaign to buy and equip a hospital.

Its president, William C. Kirkpatrick, also revealed plans to repay in full the $40,000 advanced by Home Owners Loan Corporation to set the co-operative medical clinic in operation last fall.

Simultaneously the first issue of G. H. A. "News Letter" made its appearance, a mimeographed publication, to keep the association's 2,600 members, all of whom are in Federal employ, posted on clinic affairs.

Calls Foes Ingenious.

"G. H. A. is still involved in a struggle for the right to live," said the opening editorial. "There are people who would like to see it collapse. Some of them are showing ingenuity in trying to make their wishes come true."

Theodore Wiprud, executive secretary of the District Medical Society, said, "No comment," when asked what the society thought of G. H. A. plans to build its own hospital, its hiring of an administrator and the addition of four physicians to its medical staff.

The $100,000 for a hospital, said Kirkpatrick, will be raised by members' contributions "and others interested in the program of the co-operative medical association."

To repay the HOLC members will be assessed as follows: Those holding family memberships will pay $2 a month for ten months, beginning August 1. Those holding individual memberships will be assessed $16 by ten equal monthly payments of $1.60.

Will Repay in Full.

"Payment of these assessments by our membership will enable us to repay in full the obligation of $40,000 which the members, as shown by their unanimous action, desire to discharge," said the letter sent to employes on the GHA rolls.

Kirkpatrick said the financial aid was justified on the ground that the clinic, situated at 1328 I street, would improve working efficiency and cut down sick leave. Since employes other than those of HOLC have been taken into the group, however, there is an obligation to return the money, it was said.

No decision has been made on the hospital site, Kirkpatrick declared. The Montgomery County commissioners will conduct a hearing July 25 on the GHA "feeler" application to build on a seven-acre tract in Chevy Chase.

Mrs. McCormack Dies At Home in 74th Year

Mrs. Bridget McCormack, 73, a lifelong resident of Washington, died yesterday at her home, 1137 Fifth street northeast.

Mrs. McCormack was the widow of Patrick F. McCormack, who died 14 years ago. She leaves four sons, John McCormack, of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Edward, Ignatius and Emmett McCormack, all of Washington, and two daughters, Catherine and Ann McCormack, also of Washington.

Barney Neighborhood House in Washington's Southwest Keeps Children Constructively Busy Where Gangs Grew

For at Barney Neighborhood House, at 470 N street southwest, where the seventh annual vacation school is in session, Young America is training. More than 200 youngsters between 6 and 15 are specializing, discovering talents, building mind and muscle under the guidance of 46 instructors—10 of whom are paid and the rest volunteers.

Inside the garden in the center of Neighborhood House only a sleek Maltese cat suns himself. An Egyptian lotus blooms. Children wade in a special pool, and toddle or walk across the grass, for the garden might be far, far away in some enchanted land—far from the heat and the rumble and grumble of a city where once youngsters wandered in untutored gangs, and yelled "Sissy" if they saw a lad in a clean shirt.

The vacation school this year began July 5, and it will end on August 13.

There is a carpenter shop where boys are building model automobiles, doopstops, bird houses, boats and planes. There are looms on which little girls are weaving tapestries which would do credit to Bohemian villages. Splashing rainbow colors are woven in rugs and shawls and door mats and dresses. Some of the girls are making dresses for themselves or their smaller sisters, or even their dolls.

In the music room other youngsters learn the piano and the violin from skilled teachers. If future Paderewskis and Menuhins return to their musical beginnings in some distant day, Neighborhood House may be one of them. There are classes in voice, and often in the evenings the students at Neighborhood House become actors and actresses, presenting plays in the lovely garden.

There are several baseball teams for the boys, supervised swimming for boys and girls, who ferry over to the East Potomac pool, track meets and life at camp. Mothers and children are sent to Camp Good Will, near Quantico, Va., and boys to the boys' Camp Roosevelt, on Chesapeake Bay, and elsewhere. There are special Boy and Girl Scout activities.

Cost to each student is 2 cents a day, and the total budget of the House, a Community Chest agency, is about $22,000 annually.

Miss Merrill, J. P. S. Neleigh, who has been with the House since 1906, and the other faculty members sigh as they think of uncleared alleys nearby. It is their hope someday to expand beyond the garden walls in an era when there will be no more slums.

14 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, JULY 16, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Race Money Talks.

Maryland race tracks have found a friendly State Racing Commission and, starting in September, the tracks will be privileged to dip their hands into the mutuel pool and extract 8½ cents from each dollar wagered. One penny of that amount ...st go to the State. The rest is the track's, to pocket.

POVICH.

The bettor's dollar formerly lost only 7½ cents in transit through the mutuel machines. The new license that permits the track to take an added penny is n small windfall to the track operators. That extra penny on each dollar bet will amount to $90,000 for Pimlico, $70,000 each for Laurel and Havre de Grace, and approximately $65,000 fc Bo\ according to estimates based on the wagering of ..cent years.

Thus the better's dollar takes a horrible beating by the time it goes into and comes out of the mutuel machines seven or eight times during one day's racing program. His dollar has shrunk to approximately 60 cents, with the track and the State getting the rest.

* * * *

Still More 'Murder.'

The Maryland tracks have been getting away also with another modified form of murder known as "breakage." Under the State racing commission rules, the tracks are permitted to pay off to the nickel and keep the odd pennies which nominally belong to the better. That "breakage" amounts to approximately 1 per cent of all mone- bet.

However, the Maryland race bettor does not get such a going over as the bettors of Florida, or Massachusetts, for example. In Florida, 10 per cent of the mutuel pool is taken out by the track before payoffs are made, and in Massachusetts the same percentage goes to the track and the State. "Breakage" in those States are to the dime.

The "breakage" racket is quite inexcusable and a rank gyp of the bettor. Suppose your horse, if it wins, is $1.44 to one and your two-dollar ticket calls for a payment of $4.88. Because tracks are permitted to pay off to the nickel, you get only the multiple of $1.40, or $2.80 plus your $2 investment, while the track pockets the 8 cents.

Some Fun, Eh?

And if the track at which you make your bet happens to have license to pay off to the dime as Florida and Masssachusetts tracks do, here is what can happen. Your winning horse in the mutuel machines figures to pay $1.49 for $1. For a $2 win ticket you normally would be entitled to $3.98 plus your investment of two bucks, or $5.98. But what do you get? Only $5.80, because the "breakage" to the dime permits the track to pay only $1.40 on a bet that figures $1.49 to a dollar.

The people of New Hampshire, however, are getting a break in a new "breakage" rule handed down by the New Hampshire Racing Commission to govern the payoff at the Rockingham track at Salem. Formerly, Rockingham owners paid off to the dime instead of the cent and kept the odd pennies. Under the new rule, they must pay the bettor to the penny and with such mutuel prices as $8.48, or, perhaps $50.58.

It's Real Cash!

If there is any disposition to underrate the tremendous amount of money that accrues to the track which is entitled to pay off to the dime instead of the nickel, listen: During the four years that Suffolk Downs has operated in Boston, the odd pennies the track has been permitted to keep, has amounted to nearly $1,000,000—or, to be specific, $908,377.50. That means a quarter of a million dollars a year in pennies!

The tracks count heavily on their "breakage" profits, and thus it is a banner day when the favorites or short-priced horses win the majority of the races. Because then the number of winning-bets is higher and there is more "breakage."

When the long shots win, the tracks are happy in one sense—because of the attendant publicity but actually they take a beating on the "breakage." Because few tickets are held on long shots and the track cannot take the odd pennies from the ordinary number of winning bets.

"Breakage" was a distinct racket at one of the winter tracks not so many years ago and the op-

Hines, Picard Are Defeated By Finalists

Runyan Beats Hersheyite, 4 and 3; Hines Bows by 1-Up Score.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A Staff Correspondent.

Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, July 15.—The 1938 professional golfers championship lies between the slamin', sockin' tactics of Sammy Snead, the transplanted mountaineer, and dapper, immaculate Paul Runyan, "Little Poison" of the links.

The final round combatants, representing two of the opposite types in professional golfdom, were decided late this afternoon over the Shawnee Country Club course as Runyan stopped the march of Hershey's Henry Picard, 4 and 3, and Snead accounted for Jimmy Hines on the final green.

Runyan Most Consistent.

Snead finished with four consecutive threes, a birdie, eagle and two pars, to win the most sensational battle of the tourney to date by a slender one-hole margin. Picard, in the favorite's role, saw his sub-par game of other days desert him and he was over par on more holes in the semifinals than the other three players combined.

Snead and Hines totaled 19 birdies and an eagle in their 36-hole battle, compared to only 12 birdies for the Picard-Runyan encounter. Runyan's game was the most consistent, however, as he matched or bettered par figures on each of the 33 holes, not once going over.

Tomorrow's battle, scheduled at 10:15 a. m., finds Runyan seeking his second P. G. A. title in the last five years. He won the crown in 1934. Snead, who is already the leading money winner of the year with $6,512, including the Charleston, Bing Crosby and Cincinnati match play tournaments, will be making his most important bid for a national title, the spark that is supposed to send his golf stock soaring.

Spectacular Climax.

The climax of the Snead-Hines battle could not have been improved. Even with two holes to play, after losing a three hole lead with straying drives and babied putts, Snead put together three great shots on the par five thirty-fifth hole that spelled victory from tee to green.

Hines had the honor on the decisive hole, and hit a long, straight tee shot. Snead bettered it by only a yard but that forced Hines to shoot first. He hit a long iron shot that dropped short of the green but close enough to chip for a birdie.

"Slammin' Sam" then addressed his ball, cocked those powerful wrists and out of the swing came a beautiful two iron shot, splitting the pin all the way, and the largest crowd of the tournament ran helter-skelter for a vantage spot around the green.

Hines, still playing nervously, roughing his grips, wiping his hands, looking over the line time and again, chipped short and shouted "No" as it was evident the ball would fall 3 or 4 feet from the pin. Snead stepped up to his downhill, 18-foot putt and with little deliberation knocked it in the back of the cup for a one hole lead. On the last hole, a par three, Snead placed his tee shot 7 feet from the pin and got a halve as Hines was 30 feet to the left and missed the deuce.

Hines Leads at Half.

Hines, with a six under par 67, was only one up at the half-way mark. Snead birdied the first hole of the afternoon to square it, birdied the third to go one up and made it two on the short fifth as his tee shot rested 7 inches from the pin, nearly an ace, and Hines, trying to play a stymie, knocked it in the cup. A stymie proved a margin of victory

Bucs Beaten By Dodgers

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, July 15.—Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin cooled off the Pirates today and pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 9-to-4 victory over the National League leaders.

The defeat, coupled with the New York Giants' victory in Cincinnati, shaved the Bugs' league lead to a slim margin of 2 percentage points. The win gave the Dodgers the series, two games to one.

Hamlin, scoring his fifth victory of the season, held the Pirates to eight hits. Three of them came in the first inning when the Bugs scored two runs. From the end of the first to the start of the eighth, he gave up only one safe blow and tossed shutout ball.

Bill Swift, the Pittsburgh starter, was belted in the third, when the Dodgers scored four runs on four doubles and a single. Truett Sewell, who finished the game, ran into trouble in the fourth and ninth frames, in each of which the Dodgers scored twice.

Ernie Koy, the Indian rookie, led the 13-hit Brooklyn attack with a triple, double and single. Every regular, except Hamlin, hit safely at least once.

Miss O'Steen Wins Crown

Beats Miss Decker for Women's Singles Title.

Combining a powerful forehand with an invulnerable backhand, Miss Willie O'Steen, mild-mannered, 18-year-old player, won the women's singles division of the Public Parks tennis tourney yesterday at Rock Creek Courts, defeating Miss Charlotte Decker, 4—6, 6—1, 6—3.

After a slow start, Miss O'Steen gradually gained momentum until she reached her peak near the end of the final set. She won the first game, but dropped the next two to the steady Charlotte Decker. She rallied strongly, but could not seem to cope with the beautiful drop shots of Miss Decker.

However, in the second set, Miss O'Steen received little competition. She set out with a brilliant backhand and was never trailing at any time during the set, which she won by a score of 6—1.

The first part of the third and final set was very close, with neither player able to break through her opponent's service. Nevertheless, Willie turned on the heat in the final part to win the match and the women's championship.

Born in North Carolina, Miss O'Steen came to the District 14 years ago to set an enviable record for aspiring women tennis players. After learning the fundamentals of the game at Fairlawn tennis courts in Anacostia, Miss O'Steen captured the District Playgrounds championship in 1935 and 1936. This was the first public parks tourney that Miss O'Steen had entered, and she was seeded second. Miss Decker was seeded third.

Today will be Ritzenberg day at the Rock Creek courts. It will be a brother vs. brother act in the doubles when Allie Ritzenberg teams with Mel Tarpley to face Hy Ritzenberg and Stan Haney in the doubles final. Then, in the singles semifinals top-ranking Allie will meet his fourth opponent of the tourney.

Yesterday Allie and Tarpley defeated Deane Judd and Bob Bradley, 8—6, 7—5. The service of Allie, always his greatest asset, was the determining factor in the victory. Haney and Hy Ritzenberg disposed of the youthful doubles team of Harry Brinkerhoff and Larry St. Jean, which had created an upset in a previous match when it defeated Art Simmons and Irwin Neimeyer, seeded No. 2.

Giants Beat Reds, 3 to 2

8 Hits Off Vander Meer End Season Jinx.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 15.—Johnny Vander Meer's jinx over the New York Giants ended today. After three straight setbacks at the hands of the double-no-hit sensation, the National League champions beat him and the Reds, 3 to 2, to climb within two percentage points of the loop lead.

Prince Hal Schumacher won his own game with a single with the bases loaded that brought in what proved the winning run in the seventh.

Schumacher, however, didn't finish the game. Ival Goodman came up in the eighth inning with his twenty-third homer of the year, and when the next batter hit safely, "Fireman Dick" Coffman came in to halt the rally.

Play for Japanese Ambassador Trophy Set Today at Kenwood

Neither the heat nor the humidity will slacken the activities on Washington's numerous golf courses over the week-end.

While half of Washington will be developing sun-blisters at various beaches the other half will be out on the golf courses directing emphatic expletives at overly playful golf balls.

Feature event, give and take a couple of strokes, is the final 36 holes for possession of the Japanese Ambassador Trophy at Kenwood today and tomorrow. Leading the field at the end of the first 36 holes over last week-end are Tom Fitzgerald and Dr. R. Harrison, with cards of 131 each.

Indian Spring will offer the next most colorful program with an 18-hole team ladder event and a tribal bowl handicap gallop today and tomorrow. John Olmsted is the pacesetter in the team ladder shindig, with 70, while Dick Melvin is right on his heels with 71. Those who wish to can count their scores in both events.

Keep Divoteers in Shape.

With the Maryland Open just around the corner, Congressional is keeping its cohort of divot-scatterers in shape with an 18-hole men's handicap over both days while Beaver Dam has an 18-hole women's handicap on tap today and a similar event for the male gender tomorrow.

Second round Horton Cup matches will hold the spotlight at Washington Golf and Country Club, and a two-man teams best ball handicap medal play will give the Argyle clubmen something to "chaw" about.

Capital, too, will have two-men team matches to keep the week-end ball a-rolling, while a blind bogey test today and a mixed Scotch foursome tomorrow will make things hum at the Army and Navy Country Club. Rock Creek has tentatively listed a blind bogey.

The near future brings the Maryland State Amateur one-ball selective drive tournament to Columbia Thursday and a goodly turnout of sterling talent is awaited.

July 26 will find carnival time come to Congressional with the glittering Maryland Open, when every ace golfer of the Middle Atlantic "flatlands" will be there, anxious to stick his best "putt" forward.

"Speck" Tourney Friday.

The ladies at the Army and Navy Club have something novel up their sleeves for Friday with a nine-hole "Speck" tournament. Danny Burton says, "I don't know what it is, but I "Speck" it's going to be good." Danny, how could you?

Now that it is certain that the wintry blasts have stopped blasting, the Washington Trade Association Executives' golf committee has stuck out its neck and named Thursday as the date of the annual W. T. A. E. tournament. It will be held on that day at Burning Tree course, if it doesn't snow. Those who will dare the clements are requested to be ready to tee off at 1:30 p. m. There will be a dinner at 7 p. m. for those who play golf and can, for those who play golf and can't, and for those who don't play golf and are glad of it. According to Emmett Dougherty, chairman, six prizes are already on hand and several more are expected before Thursday.

Ladies' Day on Courses.

It was ladies' day on the golf courses as well as at the ball park.

At Congressional, in handicap match play against par, Mrs. F. G. Awalt captured Class A prize with one down to par, while Class B laurels went to Mrs. A. McNitt with one up to par. Mrs. T. Williams and Mrs. P. J. Winkler divided Class C honors with 5 down to par. Mrs. D. Weir carded the lowest number of putts, 29.

Mrs. Lloyd Kihlken chalked up the lowest number of putts, 15, in a ladies day test at Indian Spring, while Mrs. K. S. Giles had low net, 84—7—77. Mrs. F. J. Kennedy required 15 strokes to negotiate the seventh hole, winning the prize in that category.

Netting an 82, Mrs. M. A. Torlinski and Mrs. N. B. Trible won the relay handicap tournament at Army and Navy yesterday, while Mrs. J. H. Chadwick and Mrs. G. A. Lynch were runners-up with 84.

Dizzy to Pitch Again Sunday

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—Manager Charlie Grimm, of the Chicago Cubs, said today he planned to pitch Dizzy Dean, the hurler who has been out of action for two months with a sore arm, in the first game of a doubleheader scheduled for Sunday with Boston's Bees.

"We have to find out some time just how Dizzy's arm is," Grimm said, "and as he used to go good against Boston we'll test his arm Sunday against the Bees."

Dean, for whom the Cubs paid $185,000 and three players to St. Louis' Cardinals, worked out this morning.

Steinbacher Leads Extra Base Attack

By Shirley Povich.

Failing in their apparent attempt to make a hit for each of the 15,000 Ladies' Day fans in the park, the White Sox nevertheless sprayed the premises with enough hits to beat the Nats, 11 to 3, yesterday.

Wes Ferrell, Jimmy DeShong and Ken Chase were throwing and ducking in the same motion—throwing baseballs and ducking the same. All told, the White Sox knocked the three Washington hurlers loose from 16 hits of all dimensions, including a home run, a brace of three-baggers and a double.

Ferrell was guilty of permitting seven of the Chicago runs—in the three innings he lasted. He was the pitching opponent of Thornton Lee until Lee knocked him out of the box in the fourth inning with a home run over the rightfield wall.

Harris Waves Him Out.

Manager Bucky Harris who had suffered Ferrell's presence until that point with increasing misgivings, emerged from the dugout as Lee's homer cleared the wall and frantically waved Ferrell out of the box and DeShong in. Harris gained little by the change, but the White Sox gained three more runs before DeShong was taken out.

The lefthanded Lee yielded ten hits to the Nats, but he was merely breezing behind the 7-1 lead the White Sox piled up for him before a man was out in the first inning. The first man out in that inning was, incidentally, Wes Ferrell. Just by way of sealing his triumph, Lee allowed no runs at all after the fifth inning.

Owen Wins Cheers.

The 15,000 customers, even in their despair at the Nats' helplessness, could appreciate the fourth inning, in which the Nats went out in one-two-three order. Because they saw one of the finest sustained demonstrations of defensive skill that a third baseman ever perpetrated.

He was Marvin Owen and he evoked the cheers of the hostile customers by making a leaping, one-hand catch of Al Simmons' vicious line drive. The echo of those cheers had scarcely died when Owen, on the next pitched ball, dashed far toward the shortstop territory, speared Zeke Bonura's hot grounder with his gloved hand, wheeled and threw Bonura out. He had a hand in the third out of the inning, too, robbing the Nats of a third straight hit when he nosedived into the sod and came up with a mouthful of dust and Buddy Myer's line drive.

For half an inning, the Nats took the lead in the ball game, when Al Simmons singled to left to score Buddy Lewis, who had also singled, but Ferrell then began to pitch the White Sox to victory.

Ferrell's Wild Pitch.

He pitched a single to Luke Appling to start the second inning and then he pitched a single to Marvin Owen. Joe Kuhel sacrificed the runners along and Ferrell wild-pitched Appling home from third. He then walked Sewell and fanned Lee, but along came Bozie Berger with a single to center and Hank Steinbacher with a double to left and the Sox had a 4-1 lead.

Buddy Lewis presented the Sox with their fifth run in the third when he made a wild throw on Radcliff's bunt, but Ferrell was completely to blame for the two Chicago runs in the fourth. He walked Sewell and then pitched a home-run ball to Pitcher Lee who, very unpitcher-like, knocked it over the fence.

DeShong took over from that point and fell afoul of the White Sox in the sixth when he pitched a single to Lee, another to Berger, a three-bagger to Steinbacher and a double to Kreevich, with the net result that the Sox had three more runs and a 10-3 lead.

Back in the fifth inning, the Nats had picked up two runs against Lee when Rick Ferrell tripled to the centerfield corner, George Case doubled and Buddy Lewis singled, but that Lee fellow wasn't bothered much.

Finland Is Assured 'Orphaned' Olympics

Helsingfors, Finland, July 15 (U.P.).—Finnish Olympic officials were assured today that the 1940 Olympic Games would be held in Helsingfors, as the Japanese cabinet officially confirmed cancellation of the games for Tokyo.

Ernst Krogius, Finnish member of the International Olympic Congress, received a telegram from Count Henri Le Bailliet-Latour, president of the congress, stating: "If Japan withdraws from the Olympic games the International Olympic Committee offers holding the games in Finland."

The telegram was received just before the Japanese cabinet's announcement in Tokyo that war in China was costing too much in men and money to permit expenditures for the games.

Japan Surrendered Olympics at Wrong Time

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, July 15.—Japan's war with China made abandonment of the Olympics inevitable, but there's a tragic side to the picture ... Within the last ten years no other country has so enthusiastically developed sports interest and talent ... Award of the games to Tokyo fulfilled long-cherished dream of Japanese athletic leaders, who had to overcome seemingly insurmountable obstacles to get the prize, only to have it crumble in their hands ... Dr. Jigoro Kano, who fathered Japan's first Olympic appearance (1912), as well as the national sport of "jude" — postgraduate jiu-jitsu—died on his way home from the last I. O. C. congress at Cairo.

GOULD.

* * * *

The Japanese have adopted American baseball, taken to tennis with sufficient skill to reach the Davis Cup challenge round (1922), and shown remarkable progress in golf ... Their Olympic plunge first attracted real attention in 1928, at Amsterdam, and has been marked by extraordinary development in both track and field sports and swimming ... Chuhei Nambu at one time held official world records for both the broad and triple jumps ... Japanese pole vaulters challenged American supremacy both at Los Angeles and Berlin.

* * * *

The crowning triumph, product of spirit, determination and technique, came in the aquatic sports at Los Angeles, where the Japanese wrested Olympic men's swimming honors from the United States for the first time ... They were outpointed at Berlin only because of the superiority of American divers ... In all other Olympic sports the Japanese entered competition with an enthusiasm and gameness that attracted admiration, even when the little sons of Nippon were obviously outclassed.

Today's mail, with an ironic touch, brings the latest "Olympic news" from Tokyo, detailing the city's official approval of plans for the construction of the main stadium, the swimming stadium and Olympic Village, together with other projects, at a total cost of more than 12,000,000 yen ... "The plans for domestic propaganda," notes the announcement, "will be mainly carried out through the following educational methods: 1, Publication of a children's Olympic reader; 2, publication of a people's Olympic reader; 3, co-operation with the magazine published by the Japanese A. A. A.; 4, flags, stationery, fans, calendars and maps pertaining to the Olympic games, and 5, Olympic song ..."

In the Northeast Community Center League, the Cards are playing .500 ball with a win and a loss. Coppage dropped a close one to the strong Merrick Boys Club nine, while Haslup hurled the Redbirds to an 11-7 victory over the Southeast Businessmen.

Dobson Sets Two World Marks in Speedboat Races

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Wrong Number.

I seem to sense a great deal of rejoicing over Japan's decision to abandon the Olympic Games of 1940 because of the war with China. But, contrary as I may appear in this matter, I am quite convinced that Japan has made a grave mistake. Naturally there isn't room for a war and the Olympic Games in the same country at the same time, but Japan could have done much better. Instead of giving up the Olympic Games, it should have given up the war.

VIDMER.

I'm quite sure that would have been a more popular decision, especially with the Chinese, but it also would have been a much better move for purely personal reasons, and it seems to me that the Nipponese have done a nip-up in failing to figure them out.

There is the economic angle to begin with. It costs the Japanese government quite a sum of money to carry on war even in a foreign country. There are guns to buy and ammunition and planes and although there is a constantly decreasing number of soldiers to feed, apparently that is a minor consideration. On the other hand the staging of the Olympic Games would provide a profit.

Of course there are a few original investments required of the government serving as host to the nations of the world. There's always a new stadium to be built. It seems to be a tradition that none of the old stadia will do. And there is the cost of constructing an Olympic village for the use of the visiting athletes. Then there is always a great deal of landscaping to be done. But the money used for these purposes is merely in the form of a loan.

Lesser of Evils.

Then there's the diplomatic angle. Japan must have realized by now that war is a very excellent way to lose friends and alienate people. Naturally Japan couldn't expect to win the devoted and undying affection of the world through the Olympic Games—the country that puts them on never does, in spite of the fact that they are supposed to promote international amity or some such nonsense. In fact, Japan could count on a fair share of criticism from the way the games were handled, the obvious partisanship of the crowd, the treatment of the visiting athletes and the high prices charged the tourists. Still, I doubt if the criticism would have been quite so intense as it is at present.

From the angle of pure satisfaction, in beating somebody, it seems to me that the Olympic Games would have provided Japan with quite as much as the war. The Nipponese have been coming along with amazing strides in the matter of athletics in the last couple of decades. They have developed tremendously in swimming and in several track and field events. No doubt they would carry off their share of victories. And they would have the satisfaction of winning from someone who not only was willing to compete but eager for competition.

Always Another Chance.

Finally, there's the angle of pure enjoyment. I don't think the Japanese nation is getting a great deal of fun out of the war, even the Chinese get mad now and then and drop a few bombs around or bombard a village and that's very annoying to the natives. Of course, it might be somewhat irritating to lose a race or fail to place in the pole vault, too, but after all if you get licked in a sporting event you can always go out and try again. If you get licked in a war it's more or less permanent.

Considering the whole situation from every angle, I am indeed convinced that Japan never should have abandoned the Olympic games at all. It isn't really fair to Finland. Japan was voted the games in 1936 and should have stayed stuck with them. Now that Japan has backed out, Helsingfors seems to be elected as the site, but just why they should have been handed to Finland is a bit bewildering. After all, Finland has been a very nice, amiable, peace-loving nation for a great many years. The Finns have gone about their business in a calm and complacent way, with nothing more vicious than an occasional sneer at Norway and Denmark which is a mere tear in the ocean compared to what some of the other countries have been doing to each other.

Finland even has paid its debts. It really doesn't seem right to inflict Finland with the Olympic games and the criticism, bickering, jealousies and denouncements that go with them.

However, it's going to be difficult for the agitators in this country to think up a reason why we shouldn't send a team to Finland and it ought to be rather amusing to see what they can dig up against the Scandinavians.

The Jews didn't want us to send a team to Berlin because of the Nazi attitude toward their people.

The Negroes would have had the Ethiopian situation as grounds to protest our going to Rome. The laundry union might have filed a protest against Japan, just as the amalgamated order of Japanese butlers and valets might have protested sending a team to China.

Pushes His Watersprite At 46.037

By the Associated Press.

Havre de Grace, Md., July 15.—E. F. Dobson, Annapolis, established two world marks with his Watersprite to take top honors in a field of 80-odd crack drivers entered in the Havre de Grace Yacht Club's ninth annual regatta.

Dobson scored his second record late in the day when his sleek craft shot across the Susquehanna River course at an average of 46.037 miles per hour in the official mile trials event for hydroplanes and inboard runabouts.

A few minutes before, he established a record for class J boats with a speed of 40.891 m. p. h. over the 5-mile course. That mark was posted in the race in which Watersprite came home behind Nittany Lion, driven by Frank Muzzey, jr., of Philadelphia, but Muzzey's boat is not qualified for the class J, which is for craft with 1,025 cubic-inch displacements.

With another full day of racing tomorrow, visiting sportsmen took part in a water carnival tonight, paraded boats and watched a fireworks display.

Twenty-four events are listed for tomorrow, five more than today, and not until tomorrow night will winners be announced, according to point totals. First laps of most events were run today, with the finals being run tomorrow.

A new boat, Rustle, entered and driven by Byron Rustle, of North Long Branch, N. J., took two in a row, showing her stern to such respected speedsters as John L. Hyde's Spectre and Edison Hedge's flying Eagle. Hyde, of Washington, was second to Rustle in the 135-cubic-inch hydroplanes, and Hedge, from Atlantic City, followed her in the event for 151-cubic-inch boats.

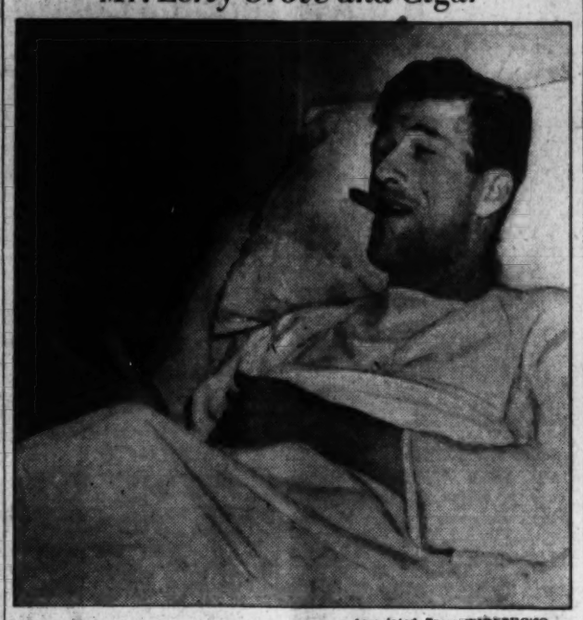
Mr. Lefty Grove and Cigar



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Big Lefty Grove, star Boston Redsox pitcher, reared back in his hospital bed yesterday and puffed on a big cigar. He said he'd be out in a couple of days and well on the road to recovery. He left the game Thursday and it was later announced his pitching arm had gone dead. Lefty insists the condition of the arm is not serious.

Grove Leaves Hospital Today; Ordered to Take It Easy for a Few Days.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 15.—The famous fiery temper of Bob (Lefty) Grove flared as of old tonight as feeling and pulse returned to his numbed pitching arm.

Grove, improving steadily as the blood vessel spasms quieted in his aging but effective salary wing, became wrathy when Dr. Edward J. O'Brien, the Boston Red Sox physician, advised him to remain in St. Elizabeth's Hospital for a second night.

"You'll be out of here in the morning!" the physician promised his famous patient.

"You bet I will!" Grove replied. "And I'll be back in uniform in the afternoon and I'm going to work out, too!"

Dr. O'Brien has authorized Grove's return to duty but he instructed Manager Joe Cronin to force Grove to go easy with his flipper until he is certain it has regained its normal strength.

The pitcher's only complaint today was "it still feels a little weak but it's much better than it was when I came in here yesterday."

Grove was his usual affable self when he was rushed to the hospital. His dead arm was not painful and he did not appear to be worried about the mysterious ailment. Numerous X-ray prints, however, failed to indicate a basic disorder and then he became bored with hospital restrictions and clamored for his discharge.

Buck Ross Holds Tribe to 7 Hits to Win.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 15.—Buck Ross won his fourth game of the season for the Athletics today, gaining a 5-to-4 victory over Cleveland when his teammates staged a three-run rally in the eighth.

The Indians broke a 2-to-2 tie in their half of the eighth when Hal Trosky doubled to score Heath and Averill, only to see the Athletics rally with two out in the last half of the inning to win.

Werber opened the Athletics' eighth by lining to Keltner. Brucker doubled, Zuber replaced Hudlin. Johnson popped to Keltner, but Chapman and Dario Lodigiani both doubled to tie the score. Galehouse replaced Zuber and was greeted by a single by Ace Parker, scoring Lodigiani with the winning run.

McLeod Favors 'Mite;' D. C. Gallery Present.

Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Pa., July 15.—Freddie McLeod, Columbia Club of Washington professional, who won the Shawnee Open on this course just 30 years ago, and whose name now heads the list of champions here on the board in the grill-room of Buckwood Inn., picks Paul Runyan, the mighty mite, in tomorrow's final against Sammy Snead.

The P. G. A. was born here, with McLeod as an originator, and in its second tournament, in 1919, McLeod was runner-up to Long Jim Barnes. He witnessed today's matches, following the Runyan-Picard encounter throughout, and is on of the many former National Open champions on the scene. He won the Open in 1908.

Other Washingtonians witnessing the twenty-first P. G. A. tournament include Robert Stead, jr., and C. Ashmead Fuller, Chevy Chase, who are among the head gallery marshals . . . Mr. and Mrs. Bishop Hill, of Chevy Chase . . . Mrs. Hill is the daughter of C. G. Worthington, owner of Shawnee and president of the Worthington Mower Co.

McLeod made the trip with two Columbia members, Martin McInerney and Walter Skinker . . . Bob Morris, public links ace, and Phil Brousseau, Argyle, also witnessed several rounds of the event, as did Jack Robinson, Indian Spring, George Walcott, Columbia; Tom Good, Kenwood, who followed Denny Shute when the latter was down to Clyde Usina . . . Good arrived as Shute won his first hole and Denny asked him to stick around for good luck . . . Dick Flynn arrived for the semifinals, while Ted Rutley, Kenwood, and Mrs. Wiffy Cox were on the scene. Otto Greiner, the Middle Atlantic and Maryland State champion, was up for a few tips.

for Snead on the next and he was three up and 12 to play. Sam missed par on the seventh to lose a hole and Hines finally evened the count on the thirteenth as Snead missed a drive.

The fourteenth was halved in bogeys, the next in birdies, Hines nearly dropping on the same hole he chipped in from a sand trap in the morning. On the sixteenth, the hole spanning the river, the players had to wait five minutes for a canoe to move from between them and the hole, and then they halved it in threes.

Runyan was apparently "in" from the very first hole of the Picard match. He dropped a 6-foot birdie putt there, and by the ninth was three up. Picard dropped a 25-foot putt on the home hole of the first round to reduce the margin to two.

In the afternoon Picard took sixes on two of the par five holes of the first nine and was four down at the twenty-seventh. He won two holes back with birdies and dropped the fifteenth to a par and caught up with his "can't win a national title" jinx, by a 4 and 3 margin.

Should he continue his clouting of the previous rounds, Snead will doubtless be a slight favorite tomorrow for the title. He is 23 under par for 185 holes, and has finished a total of 20 up over Frank Champ, Terl Johnson, Felix Serafin, Jim Foulis and Hines, an easier road to the finals than Runyan. The White Plains, N. Y., stroker is 16 under for 167 holes and has finished 17 up over Levi Lynch, Tony Manero, Ray Mangrum, Horton Smith and Picard.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

By the margin of one point, Buddy Myer holds his lead over Buddy Lewis in the Man of the Month contest following the awards made after yesterday's game. Those point awards were:

To Lewis, two points, because he made two of the Nats' ten hits, because he scored one run and drove over another.

To George Case, two points, because he made two of the Nats' hits, including a double.

To Rick Ferrell, two points, because his triple in the fifth inning figured in two Washington runs.

To Al Simmons, one point, because he drove in the Nats' first run with his first-inning hit.

To Myer, one point, because he hit the ball hard all afternoon, despite making only one hit.

To Taft Wright, one point, because, in a pinch-hitting role in the ninth, he singled.

To Ossie Bluege, one point, because he made a hit and played brilliantly afield.

Dusek Beats O'Mahoney in Mat Feature

Cliff Olson Is Victor Over Kippon in the Semifinal.

Ernie Dusek, of the Omaha Dusseks, came to town last night and quickly disposed of Danno O'Mahoney, one of the O'Mahoney boys, with a body press in 31 minutes at Griffith Stadium before approximately 1,800 spectators. It was the feature match of Joe Turner's weekly wrestling shows.

Danno, who represents one of the four title claimants now in existence, was all set to turn the heat on Ernie, after the preliminary mauling, and was doing an excellent job with his famous Irish whip, when all of a sudden Ernest sprang loose from his grip and applied the winning body press.

Previous to this, however, Danno had all the best of it. Twice he heaved Mr. Dusek into the laps of three ringside patrons, and appeared well on his way to victory. Incidentally, this was O'Mahoney's first defeat in Washington.

Added fireworks were injected into the proceeding between the third preliminary match and the semi-windup when Cliff Olson and Jack League engaged in a bit of fisticuffs in the dressing room runway as Olson was coming out on the Griffith Stadium turf for his semifinal match with Edward Kippons. League was just returning to the dressing room after defeating Bill Middlekauf. It was a renewal of an old feud between the two wrestlers.

By way of making the evening complete, Olson defeated Kippons in 10 minutes, and in so doing pulled a tendon in Kippon's leg, which will keep him idle for at least a week.

In preliminary matches, Paul Bosch threw Andy Meznier in 14½ minutes with a series of flying tackles. This was a last-minute substitute match necessitated when Hank Barber and Joe Maynard failed to appear.

Mike Mazurki, always a crowd-pleaser, had things pretty much his own way in defeating Slim Zimbleman, a newcomer, in 21½ minutes, employing a body scissors as the instrument of defeat.

And, as stated before, Jack League took the measure of Bill Middlekauf in 14½ minutes with a body press.

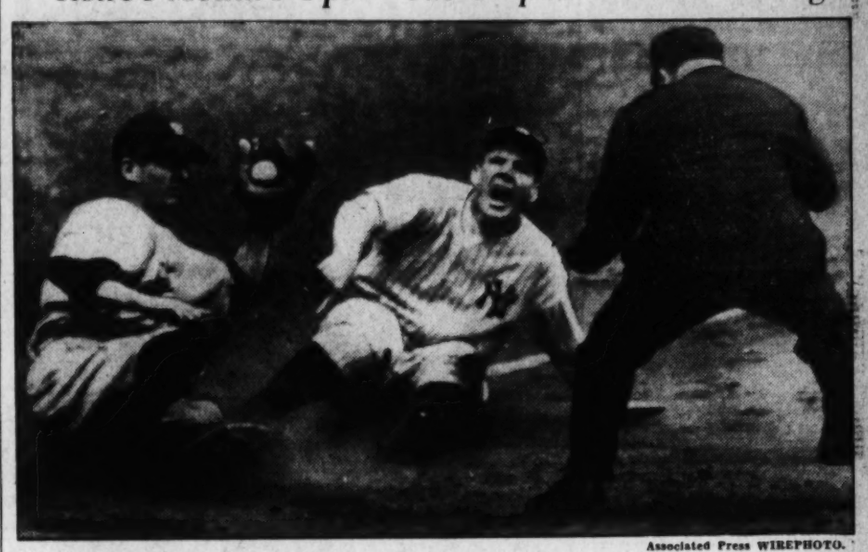
Rolfe's Mouth's Open—but Umpire Did the Talking



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Thus did Red Rolfe, of the Yankees, slide into third base in the third inning of yesterday's game at Yankee Stadium with the Detroit Tigers. Tiger Third Baseman Ross did some sliding, too—enough to catch Rolfe for an out. The Yankee infielder tried to reach third from first on a passed ball.

Miss Combs Wins Match

Misses Jacob, Williams Also Tennis Victors.

Shirley Combs, of Happy Hollow; Betty Jacob, of Montrose, and Harriett Williams, of Chevy Chase, battled their way into the quarter-final round of the Department of Playgrounds' girls' tennis tournament yesterday with hard-fought victories that bode no good for their opponents in the final rounds of play.

Miss Jacob, a member of the prominent Georgetown tennis family that includes Morgan and Mary, was taken three sets by Anna Leigus, of Georgetown Playground, before winning by the scores of 6—1, 1—6, 7—5. Miss Jacob's steadiness in the third set, after a faulty second stanza, proved the turning point in this hotly contested match.

Miss Williams, a comparative newcomer to playground competition whose fine game has made her a favorite in this tournament, triumphed over Winnie Lake, of Twin Oaks, 7—5, 7—5. Miss Lake, a veteran playground player, several times appeared ready to rally and take the second set, but Miss Williams always was able to stem the tide and hold her advantage.

The petite Miss Combs, Happy Hollow's outstanding entrant in the playground tourneys for two years, maintained her place among the favorites by beating another Georgetown representative, Viola Collins. The scores were 6—3, 6—4.

The Misses Jacob, Williams and Combs thus join Dorothy Kibler, of Burroughs; Helen Epsey, of MacMillan, and Rosalie Pope, of Burroughs, in the quarter-finals. All get their next taste of action on Monday.

Results Yesterday.

Betty Jacob (Montrose) defeated Anna Leigus (Georgetown, 6—1, 1—8, 7—5; Harriet Williams (Chevy Chase) defeated Winnie Lake (Twin Oaks), 7—5, 7—5; Shirley Combs (Happy Hollow) defeated Viola Collins (Georgetown), 6—3, 6—4.

Allison Put Out of Play

Henderson Wins From Former U.S.Champion.

Spring Lake, N. J., July 15.—Archibald Henderson, 21-year-old Chapel Hill, N. C., Davis Cup team aspirant, blasted Wilmer L. Allison, of Austin, Tex., former national singles champion, out of the bathing and tennis clubs invitation tournament in the quarter-final round today.

The Southerner was joined in the round of four by top-seeded Frankie Parker, third-ranking United States ace; Charles E. Hare, British Davis cupper, and Carlton Rood, of Brooklyn, N. Y., No. 1 player for the University of North Carolina tennis team.

Parker eliminated Robert K. Kamrath, seventh-ranking intercollegiate veteran of Austin, Tex., 6—3, 10—8, while Hare easily disposed of Hugh Lynch, of Washington, D. C., 6—3, 6—1. Rood gained the semifinals yesterday when he turned back Alfred Jarvis, of Tenafly and Williams College.

Ex-Hoya Golf Star Winner

By the Associated Press.

A spoiler of champions, McCarthy sent Gus Moreland, Peoria, Ill., the 1932 titleholder, to the sidelines in the quarter-finals this afternoon, 4 and 2.

He had disposed of Walter Emery, Houston, Tex., in the third round, 5 and 4, and yesterday eliminated Paul Leslie, Baton Rouge, La., 1936 Western champion.

McCarthy was three times Ohio State champion, and won the 1928 National Intercollegiate title while playing for Georgetown University.

Jackson Gets Giants' Coach Job

New York, July 15 (AP).—Travis Jackson, deposed as manager of the New York Giants' International League farm at Jersey City, came back to the Giants today as a coach.

The Giants announced he will serve in that capacity for the unexpired 18-month portion of his three-year contract. He was ousted as Jersey City manager last night, and Hank Deberry was named as his successor.

As coach, Jackson succeeds Tom Clarke, who becomes a scout in the Eastern portion of the country for the Giants.

erators cleaned up more money in odd pennies than they made from the other various profits of the track. They worked it this way, and in a sense it was not dishonest.

Before the horses reached the starting line, but after the mutuel windows had closed, the track operators ascertained what the winning mutuel would be on the favorite. "Breakage" at the track was to the dime. If the favorite was to pay, for example, $4.62, netting the track 2 cents in breakage on each winning bet, the operators dumped $20, $40, perhaps $50 on the favorite, bringing his pay-off down to $4.58, or $1.29 to $1. Then, paying off to the dime, they would be permitted to return the bettor only $1.20 to $1, or $4.40 for a $2 win ticket. The "breakage," in 18-cent amounts, amounted to many time more than the money they dumped into the machines to create it!

Yanks Blank Tigers, 3 to 0

Lefty Gomez Gives Up 3 Hits in 6-Frame Tilt.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—The Yankees stretched their winning streak to five straight and boosted their American League lead to a game and a half today by blanking the Detroit Tigers, 3 to 0, in their second abbreviated contest in as many days.

Like yesterday's tilt, which was washed out in the seventh, rain halted today's clash with the Yanks at bat in the last of the sixth.

Lefty Gomez, having one of his better days, set the Tigers down with three hits over the six-inning route. Only two runners passed first and none got as far as third. He fanned four, including dangerous Charley Gehringer twice.

The Yanks tallied a run in the first on Rolfe's single, Tommy Henrich's double and Joe DiMaggio's fly. They added their second run in the fourth on singles by Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey and Joe Gordon's infield out, and wound up the scoring in the fifth with a run on a walk, Rolfe's single and Dimaggio's grounder.

The win, coupled with the Cleveland Indians' loss to Philadelphia, boosted the Yanks' American League lead by a full game.

Kitty's Rival Wins Feature Event at Hagerstown, Pays $7.40 Mutuel

Silver Arch Disqualified For 2d Spot

Disown Is Given Place; Lady B. Advanced to Third Position.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Fair Grounds, Hagerstown, Md., July 15.—Kitty's Rival, winner of three straight races at Wheeling before being shipped here, showed that a change of tracks did not dull her speed by leading virtually throughout the fourth race, outstanding event on today's program.

The contest over the Mason-Dixon Course was marked by a disqualification, the second of the meeting, when O. S. Bloom's Silver Arch, which finished second, was erased from the money circle for carrying Disown to the outside fence entering the stretch. With Silver Arch removed, Disown took second money with Lady B. advancing to third position.

Silver Arch was half of the Trainer C. Wade entry and teamed with Take Off. Jockey Manny Berg seemed more intent on getting out in the good going entering the stretch than in fouling Disown but the results were the same.

Kitty's Rival Pays $7.40.

Kitty's Rival was given a slight tussle by Lady B. in the opening furlong but soon went to the front, never to be headed, under Atkinson's handling. She paid a $7.40 mutuel.

Silver Arch and Disown finished so near the wall that borders the outside of the stretch that they were out of range of the finish camera. However, the judges had their positions.

Jockey Berg was suspended for the remainder of the meeting, to be effective after tomorrow's program. The stewards will refer his case to the Maryland Racing Commission.

Claude Feltner's Any Woman finally emerged from the maiden ranks in the first race, the Runantell filly leading Moon Hunter and Stenographer to the wire to bring her backers a $5.10 mutuel and start a $51.50 daily double. Monocacy put the finishing touches on the twin wager by taking the second race from Sun Belle and Can Bloom, the latter the favorite. Jockey J. Atkinson gave the $10.90 shot a good ride.

Itsie Bitsie, a "long time no see winner's circle," got home in good style in the third event to produce an $8.70 mutuel. Apprentice B. Everson took the Scotch Bloom gelding to the front early and he finished two lengths ahead of Penway, with Ardor third.

Gay Lass, a $39.20 shot, surprised the talent in the fifth race by winning under a good ride by Jockey Leon Garrett. Unable to be as close as second in eight tries at Charles Town, the Brown Bud mare downed Pretty Lass and Coat Tails today.

Bosox Edge Browns, 5-3

Bobby Doerr's 4-Run Homer in 6th Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 15.—Bobby Doerr's four-run homer in the sixth inning today provided the Red Sox with the wherewithal to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 5-3, in the series' opener.

The Browns, beaten in nine of their ten starts against Boston this season, had a 3-1 lead until Doerr blasted his third circuit drive of the year. Harlond Clift provided the visitors with two of their tallies in the fifth when he belted Relief Pitcher Archie McKain for a four-bagger with George McQuinn aboard.

Howard Mills, southpaw product from nearby Dedham, went the distance for the Browns and set the stage for Doerr's clean-up wallop by hitting Manager Joe Cronin on the right knee, giving Pinky Higgins a clean single and permitting speedy Ben Chapman to beat out an adroitly placed bunt.

Cubs Defeat Phils, 4 to 1

French Is Effective on Mound for Bruins.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—Chicago's Cubs continued their revived play today behind the effective pitching of Larry French, defeating the Philadelphia Phillies, 4 to 1, before a ladies day crowd of 21,968.

French permitted ten hits in scoring his sixth win of the season. However, after the first inning when the Phils combined Buck Jordan's single and Gil Brack's double for their only run, only one runner advanced as far as second.

The Cubs collected ten hits.

Wheat Lower As Uncertainty Rules Trading

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—Increased nervousness of traders and material downturns of wheat prices resulted today from continuing uncertainties about Federal loans, together with expected notice of acreage allotments.

Aggravating the puzzles of traders was general belief that the acreage allotment would parallel the Government loan basis, and be near to the minimum permitted. With primary receipts of newly harvested winter wheat remaining large, the day's lowest prices were registered at the last. Much attention was given to messages indicating that farmers, especially in the Southwest, were dissatisfied with the Government loan basis, and that but few would sign up.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1¼ to 1½ cents down compared with yesterday's finish; July, 70⅞ to 70½; September 70¾ to 70⅝. Corn, ⅜ to ⅞ advanced; July, 59½; September, 60⅞ to 61. Oats, unchanged to ¼ off. Rye, at ⅜ to ⅝ decline, and provisions varying from 12 cents setback to 5 cents bulge.

Indusfrial and Rail Stocks Display an Orderly Price Recovery; Trading Was Dull.

New York, July 15.—Orderly recovery in prices in all industrial and rail groups ruled today in the dullest dealings of any full day in nearly a month, or just before the upswing started. Interest of brokers and traders was diverted by the parade of the world fliers through streets in the financial district. After Wall Street's cheering and ticker tape throwing were over, transactions in securities quickened perceptibly with volume in the last hour at the highest levels of the session.

An advance of 0.43 point in the composite average of the 100 key stocks on the big board was enabled principally by good gains in the steel, store, motor and blue chip manufacturing stocks. There were 765 issues traded and turnover of 933,010 shares was the smallest of any full day since June 17, second to the last of the narrow and stagnant sessions which preceded the more recent activity.

Chicago wheat ended 1⅛ to 1½ cents a bushel lower. Cotton turned active but net changes at the close were limited to a point on either side.

Rise Based on Facts.

Stocks actually had some constructive news on which to build a rise. The rise in automobile output in the first full week after the July 4 holiday was larger than had been generally anticipated. Detroit advices also indicated a somewhat better demand for new automobiles as well as padding on the rumor that 1939 models may cost less and look better. Chrysler was the active leader of the session with a gain of 1¼ and General Motors and Yellow Truck also turned in advances and were well up among the most popular shares.

Steel News Bright.

Steels benefited by news from Youngstown and Buffalo of further sharp gains in operating rates in those important districts, the former showing a 6-point rise to 36 per cent of capacity and the latter reporting the best level of output since before Christmas, 1937.

Steel common finished 1¾ points to the good, Bethlehem 1⅝ and National 1 point. Iron and steel fabricators, according to trade reports, are experiencing better business.

Dollar exchange was strong against European currencies in listless dealings. The bond section was, in the main, less firm than stocks, although small gains predominated.

Bonds Were Listless.

Listed bond trading was deep in the summer doldrums today, with most changes favoring the holders. Speculative issues furnished almost all the activity, and after early wavering the main tendency was upward.

Gains of small fractions were numerous, and some bonds moved up a point or two. Foreign dollar issues were quiet and steady. Money market bonds were firm, and some bonds moved up a point or two. Foreign dollar issues were quiet and steady. Money market bonds were firm, and some of them touched fresh highs. Turnover was only $5,190,000.

Junior Rails Active.

Secondary and default carrier bonds were fairly active, with fractional advances the rule. Some of the better grade issues, such as Northern Pacific liens, moved up 2 points or so.

Interborough bonds advanced in the local traction group, but B. M. T. 4½s receded. Holding company bonds were dull and activity tapered off in the convertibles. International Telephone bonds remained active and firm.

Treasury Issues Improve.

Long-term United States Treasury issues tended to improve by small fractions, but the guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home corporations moved lower. Counter trading occasioned no changes of importance in Treasury notes and bills. American Telephone 3⅛s moved to highs on the ready distribution of the new 3 per cent issue of a subsidiary. Best grade power and light, railroad and industrial bonds were steady.

Foreigns Unchanged.

Little business was done in foreign dollar bonds and changes were minute. The default groups were idle and mostly unchanged. Italian and Japanese issues drifted lower. Best grade foreigns hardly appeared on the bond tape.

Price Changes In Steel Leads To Confusion

Buying Is Temporarily Halted by New Schedule.

New York, July 15.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. currently comments as follows:

"Few developments of the past few years have been of more far-reaching importance than the recent steel price announcements. The possibilities for change inherent in the new schedules have left producers and consumers alike confused. Final appraisal of the alterations likely to occur through industry will probably require some time, perhaps two or three years but some general conclusions are permissible at this time.

"The price changes, while revolutionary in their extent, represent another step in the method of quoting steel to meet basic shifts in competitive conditions. In essence, the new schedules do not abolish the basing point method of making prices, but seriously modify the previously existing system by (1) establishing several new basing points; and (2) eliminating most of the differentials between Pittsburgh base prices and those at other centers.

"The new prices will create new problems not only for steel producers but for their customers as well. The elimination of previous price differentials at basing points and the establishment of new basing points for many products are reflected in widely varying reductions in delivered steel prices by districts.

"From the standpoint of steel demand, the price reductions to date have meant little. The confusion generated among consumers by the extent of the changes has, in fact, tended to hinder new buying temporarily. It is quite possible that the new schedules may induce a series of minor price wars before the new status is completely clarified and consumers will probably continue fairly cautious in placing new commitments for the early future, at least."

Capt. Robison Dies Suddenly In New York

Capt. John Keeler Robison, U. S. N. (retired), who as chief of the Bureau of Engineering had approved the lease of naval oil lands to the Doheny-Sinclair interests, died suddenly in New York Thursday, the Navy Department announced yesterday. He was 67.

Capt. Robison held the temporary rank of rear admiral during the years 1921-25 while he was chief engineer of the Bureau of Engineering. In this capacity, he sanctioned the lease of Federal oil reserves to companies headed by Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair.

The Teapot Dome affair followed, and Capt. Robison was involved in the subsequent Senate investigation. In 1925, at the expiration of his four-year term as temporary rear admiral in charge of the Bureau of Engineering, he was passed over for promotion to the permanent rank of rear admiral and was returned to the rank of captain.

He served as aid to the commandant of the New York Navy Yard and later as captain of the yard until his retirement June 30, 1926. Since then he lived in New York. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jane M. Robison, of 75 East Fifty-fifth street, New York City. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

A native of Ann Arbor, Mich., Capt. Robinson was appointed to the Naval Academy from the First District in Michigan in 1897. After graduation, he attended the Ecole de Genie Maritime in Paris.

During the Spanish-American War he served on the U. S. S. Minneapolis, and after duty in the Bureau of Steam Engineering, joined the U. S. S. Iowa in 1900. Later he served on the U. S. S. Philadelphia, U. S. S Marblehead, U. S. S. Ranger, U. S. S. Prairie and U. S. S. Newport.

He was on duty at the Naval Academy from October, 1904, until 1906, and was attached to the U. S. S. Indiana. He made the world cruise with the battle fleet oon the U. S. S. Kentucky, and from 1909 until 1911 was on duty in the Bureau of Steam Engineering. He commanded the U. S. S. Dixie for three years, and from 1914 until early in 1917 was in charge of the Newport Torpedo Station, Newport, R. I.

He was awarded the Navy Cross and a special letter of commendation from the War Department for distinguished service during the World War in command of the Cruiser Huntington, engaged in transporting and escorting troops and supplies to France. In August, 1918, he became chief staff commander, United States Naval Base, Cardiff, Wales, and in March, 1919, was transferred to United States Naval Headquarters, London.

He commanded the U. S. S. Florida from June 28, 1919, until May, 1920, when he was ordered to the Office of Naval Operations, Navy Department.

He was placed in command of the guard of honor at the bier of President McKinley. In 1902 he was appointed military attache to Germany, serving there four years. He spent several months in the office of the chief of staff here, and in 1907 resigned from the service. For the next ten years he engaged in civil pursuits in Portland.

Virginian Says He Shot Doctor To Protect Kin

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., July 15.—Noel Bush, 60, retired Army officer, was quoted today by Commonwealth's Attorney B. D. Peachy as saying he intentionally shot and wounded his son-in-law, Dr. John B. Porterfield, 36, because the latter had attacked Mrs. Porterfield.

Previously, Dr. Porterfield was quoted as saying he was fired upon when his father-in-law mistook him for a burglar.

Peachy said Bush told him he shot Dr. Porterfield, a director of State health work, after the physician had taken Mrs. Porterfield to task for not putting out a fire in a mattress, and that the story of Dr. Porterfield being mistaken for a burglar was agreed upon before the wounded man was taken to the hospital.

A slight improvement was reported today in the condition of Dr. Porterfield, who was wounded in the abdomen by a small caliber pistol bullet that punctured the intestines in four places. His condition was considered critical.

Bush, who has made his home with the Porterfields for a number of years, was held in jail on a charge of felonious shooting.

Dr. Porterfield shortly after the shooting was quoted as saying his bedding was ignited by a cigarette when he dozed about 2 a. m.; that he ran into the hall to get a bucket of water, and was fired upon by his father-in-law, who thought he was a burglar.

Major Brown Honor Guest of Arlington Boys

Washington Police Chief Says Clubs Reduced Delinquency.

Arlington County opened its first boys club last night and the guest of honor was Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of Washington police and founder of the department's system of Police Boys Clubs.

About 250 residents of Lyon Park, eager to see the new facilities provided by their contributions for the Lyon Park Boys Club, were told by Brown how clubs and similar organizations in Washington have reduced juvenile delinquency by 75 per cent.

Prior to organization of the police clubs in Washington in 1933, Brown said, 352 boys were arrested for criminal offenses yearly. In 1937, he said, the total was 92.

Frank C. Hanrahan, Arlington County commissioner, commended Maj. Brown for his leadership in the boys club movement. He urged backers of the Lyon Park club to continue to finance the project through neighborhood subscriptions.

Several members of the club gave an exhibition of boxing. Catherine and Jeanne Payne, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Luther Wise, danced. Mrs. Alice Manning, Mrs. Mary Mayhugh and Mrs. Nita Johnson sang a group of songs.

The club was sponsored by the Lyon Park Citizens Association, whose members raised funds for equipping the Lyon Park Community House with facilities for athletics and games.

E. R. Leister, president, was master of ceremonies at the gathering last night. Other officers are John W. Wise, vice president; James Davidson, secretary; Mrs. C. I. Kephart, treasurer, and Col. Calvin Kephart, chairman of the advisory committee.

Locking the Stable After the Horse Is Stolen

As a distinguished writer penned, "All the laws in the world will not serve to protect a fool from his own folly." The time for a prospective investor to get the facts about the venture he is contemplating is BEFORE he risks his dollars. Failure to do so may be disastrous.

The Better Business Bureau is the place to get factual information about contemplated investments—and the time to get them is BEFORE buying the security or signing the contract. There is no charge to members of the public for this service.

If Grandma Had Twins, Watch Out! Warns Va. Board

If there were twins among your own or your wife's ancestors, then there's more chance that you, too, will draw a pair in the birth lottery.

The State health department's bureau of vital statistics has computed from statistics that ordinarily there is a 100-to-1 chance that you'll not get twins. But if grandpa had a twin, then——

"It increases the probability from the average of 10 cases in 1,000 births to as high as 80."

The homicide squad said Mrs. Fisher's husband died two months ago, and that she left a note, addressed to her daughter, Amanda Fisher, saying loneliness was responsible for her action.

Mrs. Fisher was found in the kitchen, seated in a chair and slumped over the stove, after neighbors detected the smell of gas and called police.

WARNING
ANALYZE CAREFULLY
Actual conditions are frequently entirely different than impressions gained from advertisements. Misleading wording and half truths require careful analysis. We try to understate our advantages, consequently, . . .

LONG BEACH
DOES NOT CLAIM THE BEST OF EVERYTHING. We do, however, invite and urge everyone seeking a summer home location to visit Long Beach and investigate before purchasing elsewhere.

YOU WILL FIND
LONG BEACH—located on the open Chesapeake Bay, not on an inlet, river or creek. It has a safe, natural sand beach, equally attractive to bathers and swimmers. Sensible building restrictions are rigidly enforced. Level beach lots, wooded knolls, rolling hills, and a few cliff lots make individual home treatment easy.
You will also find good fishing and crabbing. The residents are fine comrades and good neighbors.

Bob Burns Says—

Every once in a while one of the warring nations breaks the rules of the international treaty with a little mistake like invading a peaceful nation or dropping a bomb on a neutral ship and their excuse never sounds humorous because it's written by one of their brainiest statesmen.

But if you boil their lengthy alibi down in simple words it's almost as funny as the convict's alibi when the warden found an 18-inch file under his mattress. He looked at the warden innocently and said: "Oh, my wife must've dropped it when she visited me Sunday—she's a manicurist."
